U. S. Control Of Nonfarm Male Labor Begins July 1

McNutt Issues 4-Point Program To Put Workers Where Most Needed

By Ben W. Gilbert

Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission yesterday ordered the hiring of all male workers outside of agriculture placed under the control of the United States Employment Service by July 1, to enable a worker anywhere "to take his most useful place on the industrial firing line."

A four-step program which he said "stiffened" the present "voluntary" system was announced by McNutt to meet acute shortage of "strong" male labor nationally.

"Industries requiring able-bodied male workers are confronting more serious difficulties in holding and recruiting manpower than at any time since we entered the war," McNutt said. He expressed "alarm" that "overoptimism with respect to an early ending of the war" is contributing to the Nation's manpower troubles.

Priority Referral System

1. A Nation-wide system of "priority referral" is to be established by July 1 requiring employers to hire male workers (except for agriculture) only with the approval of the United States Employment Service or by "arrangement" with the USES. Workers are to be referred to work in accordance with its importance to the war effort, but "maximum possible freedom of choice" is to be allowed both management and labor.

2. In WMC's 184 listed Group 1 and Group 2 labor shortage areas, employment ceilings are to be fixed limiting the number of men who may be employed in specific establishments. Employers whose activities are restricted by the ceilings would be encouraged to hire women.

3. Manpower priorities committees will be set up in the 184 shortage areas to decide which industries are entitled to priorities in the referral of available male labor.

To Intensify Transfers

4. The USES will intensify its recruiting activities to transfer men from labor surplus areas "into those areas where urgent war production requires more labor." Workers will be urged, but not compelled to move.

Roosevelt's Slip Of Tongue Points To 4th-Term Race

By International News Service

Members of Congress disclosed that President Roosevelt, by a slip of the tongue at a White House reception yesterday, revealed that he is a candidate for a fourth term.

The "slip" was said to have occurred as the President greeted a congressional delegation including Representative [illegible] (R., N. Dak.), Union [illegible] for President in 1936.

According to others present, Mr. Roosevelt asked Lemke:

"How are you, Bill? Are you going to run against me this time?" Lemke replied, "No."

A second later the President, in what members of the congressional party interpreted as a "quick attempt at recovery," said:

"Maybe neither of us had better run this time."

WMC to Draft D.C. Rules Today Conforming to McNutt Order

The plan to bring all critical labor shortage areas under tight Government control will be studied for application in Washington at a meeting today of the area War Manpower Commission's labor management committee.

The city is listed as a Group 1 acute shortage area under Commissioner McNutt's new order restricting hiring of male workers.

It means that the United States Employment Service will be empowered to limit the number of men employed in business establishments here.

It also will mean that the large majority of workers hired will have to be drawn from the estimated thousands of women in Washington who thus far have ignored the area WMC's plea that they take essential civilian jobs.

One of the most immediate results looked for is alleviation of the plight of local restaurants and laundries which have been faced with possible shutdown among their branches for lack of help.

But motion picture houses, department stores and a large group of retail businesses which are not considered absolutely essential to the functioning of this city as a war center will have to rely exclusively on the USES for future hiring of employes.

One of the tasks before today's labor-management meeting will be the drawing up of "priority" lists of local establishments, on the basis of which "allocations" of male workers will be determined.

An announcement will follow the meeting, explaining just how Commissioner McNutt's order will affect the labor picture here and asking cooperation of employers in resolving one of the worst manpower bottlenecks to hit Washington since the outbreak of war.

Bund's Aid to Defendants Told; Laughlin Indicted in Baltimore

Charged With Attempt To Impede Justice In Robbery Trial

A bench warrant was issued yesterday by Federal District Court in Baltimore for the arrest of Attorney James J. Laughlin, counsel for two of the alleged seditionists currently on trial here, following his indictment on two counts of attempting to impede and obstruct the administration of justice.

The indictment was returned in connection with Laughlin's activities during the trial early in 1942 of Hilliard Sanders and William Leo Keith, two of the four men convicted in the $52,000 robbery of a bank messenger at Hyattsville, Md., in September, 1941.

When word of the indictment reached Washington, Laughlin prepared and issued a statement which he read to Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher, trial jurist in the sedition case, asking for a mistrial on the grounds that news of the indictment would cause prejudice to be raised against him. The motion was immediately denied.

Charges Intimidation

In a later statement, issued from his office, Laughlin charged he was being persecuted and that "it is apparent that the powers that be will leave no stone unturned to intimidate me and force me from the sedition case. Under no circumstances will I be intimidated," he said.

The first count of the Baltimore indictment charges Laughlin endeavored to submit false alibi evidence by producing a witness (Supt. L. F. Chapman of the Florida State Prison Farm) who attempted to state that Sanders made a visit to the prison on September 25, 1941, when he actually made the visit on a different date.

The second count accuses the attorney of submitting false affidavits, also dealing with Sanders' visit to the prison, in connection with a new trial motion for Sanders and Keith before Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

In his statement read before Justice Eicher, Laughlin asserted he "was not fearful of the outcome" and that the case "will embarrass many people, even the judge in Baltimore."

The statement claimed that prison farm records disclosed that

Distributed Literature Of 4, Offered Forum to 3 Others, Gissibl Says

By James E. Chinn

"Haus Fatherland," headquarters of the Chicago unit of the German-American Bund in 1937 and 1938, was a distribution center for the anti-Semitic and anti-Communistic literature of four defendants in the mass sedition case and a forum for discussions of Nazi philosophies and ideologies by three others, Peter Gissibl, leader of the organization at that time, testified yesterday at the trial.

On and off the stand at least a dozen times in the last week, Gissibl, the Government's first important witness, continued his testimony by revealing that the Chicago bund sold "The Red Network" of Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, "The Liberation" of William Dudley Pelley, chieftain of the Silver Shirts; "The Defender" of Gerald B. Winrod, and the phamplets of Robert Edward Edmondston, head of the Economic Research Service.

"Why?" asked Joseph W. Burns, assistant to Chief Federal Prosecutor O. John Rogge.

"Because it was anti-Jewish and anti-Communistic" came the reply.

3 Spoke Before Bund, He Says

Gissibl also disclosed that three other defendants—Mrs. Lois de Lafayette Washburn, organizer of the National Liberty Party; Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, national commander of the bund, and Herman Max Schwinn, the "Gau West" or western leader—had spoken at Chicago bund meetings while he was at its head.

Twice Mrs. Washburn was placed on the platform at bund meetings at her own requests, the witness said,—the first time in the summer of 1937 and the second in the spring of 1938. She appeared on both occasions, he explained, as an officer of the American Gentile League, and each time told him the league was in need of funds. Instead of cash, he declared, he compensated her with the gift of "several thousand envelopes and letterheads."

Gissibl testified that both Kunze and Schwinn addressed bund meetings in 1938. Schwinn's topic was "Our Struggle in America." The witness was not asked the subject

Adjournment Skirmish

Republicans Insist D-Day Should Find Congress on Job

By Robert C. Albright

A Congress clearing decks for an 11-week adjournment around June 20, yesterday ran into Republican objections that may keep both Houses here all summer on a three-day recess basis.

The Senate Republican Steering Committee, at a meeting called to pass on adjournment plans, failed to reach any agreement. Members said there were some serious objections to absence from Washington on D-Day.

Democratic leaders are said to have advanced a compromise arrangement, similar to the plan followed last summer, under which House and Senate leaders of either party could call Congress back at any time.

This plan was said to be acceptable to Republicans in case there is a recess, but there was a wide divergence on the plan to adjourn until the Tuesday after Labor Day.

Although both parties must take time out for the Republican convention in Chicago June 26 and the Democratic convention July 19, some wanted to reconvene Congress immediately thereafter, and others threatened to insist on no absences longer than three days.

House and Senate Democratic leaders, proceeding on the assumption that satisfactory arrangements still can be made for a recess no later than June 22, signaled full speed for all legislation.

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) whose money bills must all clear Congress before the departments run out of funds on the June 30 fiscal year's end, said the last of the bills, carrying Army and deficiency appropriations, will be in the Senate's hands in another week or two.

Raiders Gain Access to All Nazi Targets

Vital Objectives In Poland, Balkans Brought Within Effective Range

By Eddy Gilmore

Somewhere in Russia, June 2 (AP). American Flying Fortresses escorted by American Mustangs and Russian Yak fighters landed at new United States bases in the Soviet Union today after bombing Axis targets in Romania in an historic inauguration of shuttle bombing between Britain, Italy, North Africa and Russia.

(The planes apparently flew from bases in Italy, although their place of departure was not announced.) The official Moscow announcement said one bomber and one fighter was lost.

Prepare for New Assaults

Soviet and American ground crews who have worked side by side for months to establish the bases, raced out to greet the first American planes as they rolled onto the landing strips.

Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, head of the U. S. military mission to Russia, described it as "a brief but happy celebration before servicing the aircraft with fuel and ammunition for another call on the Axis en route to their home bases in England, Italy and Africa."

Unable to speak Russian, the American airmen gaily hailed the Russians as "Ivan." The grinning Soviet mechanics replied jovially in kind.

The bombers and fighters were preceded by American photographic reconnaissance planes.

High Officials on Hand

High American and Russian officials and military men were on hand to witness the arrivals, vast significance of which was pointed out by General Deane, who said in a statement:

"This is shuttle bombing—bombing that makes vulnerable all the industrial facilities of eastern Germany—bombing that can be carried out when weather prohibits returning to British or Mediterranean bases—and bombing that will require redistribution of the German fighter defenses."

Idea for the Russian bases was credited to Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander in chief of the American Army Air Forces, but it first took fruit during the Moscow conference of Secretary of State Hull last October 19-November 1.

Subsequently it was discussed at the Teheran conference of President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, and the tremendous task of creating, manning and supplying the bases got under way in February.

The bases already were named Ecussa, or Eastern Command, United States Strategic Air Force.

Col. Alfred Kessler, jr., 45, of Passaic, N. J., is commanding one of the American bases in Russia.

6500 Tons of Bombs Spread From 'Wall' To Hungary, Romania

London (Saturday), June 3 (INS)—The mighty Allied air offensive assumed a new pattern of invasion bombing yesterday as some 4500 planes, 3500 of them American, hammered Europe from the French Channel coast to Hungary and Romania and inaugurated the first shuttle service to Russia.

The RAF sent a strong force of heavy bombers toward France about midnight.

The powerful Allied air fleets dropped an estimated 6500 tons of bombs on Europe.

Highlighting the great assault, the United States Eighth Air Force in Britain made its greatest attack of the war on the Atlantic wall in France, sending up to 1500 heavy bombers and fighters to flatten fortifications before D-Day.

In the day's second attack, a big fleet of Britain-based Flying Fortresses and Libertaors, well escorted by fighters, hit rail facilities in the Paris area in the late evening without enemy fighter opposition.

The big bombers went out after U. S. medium bombers also had hammered the French coast and railway targets and British fighter-bombers and rocket-firing planes swept roads in northern France

Silver Spring Man 'Occupies' Valmontone

By Daniel De Luce

Valmontone, Italy, June 2 (AP).—The brawny hands of an American Army sergeant tugged at a bell rope in Valmontone's cathedral at 6 a. m. today, ringing the hour of liberation for 100 Italian civilians, four policemen and two priests who had remained throughout the Allied assault on the key town on Highway 6.

CONNOR

A famed beachhead reconnaissance patrol, "The Snoop Troop," led by Lieut Frank W. Connor, jr., Silver Spring, Md., moved into Valmontone at the first light of day today without firing a shot.

Its tall stone walls shattered by Allied bombs and shells, Valmontone lay seemingly dead on a little knoll between the railroad and Highway 6—the Via Casilina—which go winding northwest 20 miles to Rome.

Yet when Sergt. John Samples, Johnson City, Ill., rang the bronze bell in the shrapnel scarred tower of the cathedral of Santa Maria, Valmontonians poured out of a deep shelter under the Pampile Palace next door.

Many American lives were lost in yesterday's attacks of infantry and armor against Valmontone's defenses, but during the night the Germans withdrew the bulk of their artillery and tanks protecting the highway.

Lieut. Walter Gill, Roswell, N. Mex., scouted one part of the town; Sgt. James McGee, Daly City, Calif., another. When they re-

Yanks Storm Ridge, Increase Biak Pressure

Reported Mopping Up in Stiff Struggle To Capture Airdrome

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Saturday), June 3 (AP).—American jungle troopers fought to the top of a heavily wooded ridge overlooking the Bosnek-Mokmer road to increase their pressure Thursday on the desperate Japanese defenders of Biak, it was announced today.

"We are now mopping up," a headquarters spokesman said of the Americans' week-old struggle to throw out the Japanese who have been holding up the advance on the importan Mokmer airdrome on the important Mokmer airdrome since Monday.

Storming of the ridge was achieved near Ibdi and Mandom, villages just off the main route between Bosnek and Mokmer airdrome which is only 880 miles from the Philippines. The Sorido and Borokoe airfields are just beyond Mokmer.

Ground troops received the aid of big Liberator bombers which tore apart the enemy strongpoints with 80 tons of bombs.

Savage small-scale jungle fighting flared also in British New Guinea, more than 450 miles southeast of the Biak battleground, as by-passed Japanese ambushed one of the Allied carrier lines 20 miles southeast of Aitape, killing 9 Americans and 6 native helpers. The enemy got out with the loss of only one man.

Allied fliers were carrying on widespread bombing attacks meanwhile with Liberators again hitting the approaches to Truk, enemy bastion in the Carolines. They hit Stawan, 189 miles southeast of Truk, and Woleai, 525 miles west of Truk.

Or 'Complete Destruction'

Pope Deplores Idea That War Must End in 'Complete Victory'

London, June 2 (AP).—Pope Pius declared today that the idea that the war must end in complete victory or complete destruction is "a stimulant toward prolonging the war," and, expressing hope for an early peace, he praised "the heralds of wisdom and moderation" as against those "who openly espouse vengeance."

Addressing the College of Cardinals on his name day, the pontiff said, as Allied armies approached Rome, that "whoever dared raise a hand" against the city "would be guilty of matricide," and in a discussion of Christianity's current influence in world affairs he decried "cleavages from the church" and the "vast division and dispersal of religious confessions."

Speaking less than two months after the Patriarch of Russia and the Archbishop of York had repudiated the Pope in his role as Christ's vicar on earth, Pius declared that those who so contended "are ignoring and misinterpreting the profound meaning of papal primacy."

Leading into his discussion of the prolongation of the war, the Pope declared that "while the instruments of destruction have reached a potency never before known, and while the world finds itself on the eve of still more dramatic and, according to some, decisive events, the discussion of the fundamental outlook and of the detailed guiding principles of the future peace attracts more and more participants."

"Yet," he continued, "besides the heralds of wisdom and moderation there are not wanting others who scarcely dissimulate their program of violence or who openly espouse vengeance. . . .

"In many is thus born the impression or the fear that there may not be, even for the peoples and nations as such, any alternative but this: a complete victory or complete destruction.

"When once this sharp dilemma has entered men's minds, its baneful influence is a stimulant toward prolonging the war, and even among those who by natural impulse or for realistic considerations would be disposed to a reasonable peace, the specter of that alternative and the conviction of a real or supposed will of the enemy to destroy national life to the very roots, smothers all other reflections and instills into many the courage of desperation.

"Those who are under the domination of such feelings go on, as in a hypnotic sleep, through abysses of unspeakable sacrifice and constrain others to a war of extermination that drains their life blood, a war whose economic, so-

House Committee Approves 4½-Million UNRRA Fund

By Mary Spargo

There has been nothing like the "brutality and bestiality" visited upon Europe by the Nazis, the House Appropriations Committee told Congress yesterday in recommending the full budget requests for UNRRA, new world relief organization, and lend-lease.

For UNRRA the committee approved a request of 450 million dollars to pay for this Nation's participation in getting food, medicine and other essential supplies to nations which the United States Army hopes to liberate from the German stranglehold by next December. Additional authority was given the President to transfer to UNRRA 350 million dollars of lend-lease funds which might not be needed immediately.

Approves Lend-lease Fund

For lend-lease the committee gave blanket approval to a budget request of $3,450,570,000. Hearings disclosed that lend-lease funds will be used to repair Russian factories and mines destroyed by the Germans. Leo T. Crowley, head of the Foreign Economic Administration, told the committee that the Russians understood so well the art of "total war" that practically anything they requested through lend-lease or otherwise had a direct military contribution.

The committee recommended an appropriation of $325,000 for the Export-Import Bank of Washington, payable from the funds of the banking corporation.

Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, director of materiel for the Army Service Forces, disclosed that the Army expects to have such control of the continent of Europe between July and December that it will need $562,000,000 to feed, clothe and maintain the liberated

Valmontone And Velletri Overrun by U. S. Forces

Fiercely Resisting Germans Being Slowly Pounded Back by Fifth Army

Naples, June 2 (AP).—Powerful American armored and infantry forces smashed through the key German strongholds of Valmontone and Velletri in the Alban Hills before Rome today, shattering the enemy's last-ditch defenses and foreshadowing the beginning of the end of the battle for the Eternal City.

Valmontone, 20 airline miles from Rome on the Via Casilina, main escape route for the mauled German Tenth Army, and Velletri, 18 miles southeast of the Italian capital, fell after days of vicious assault.

Early tonight fierce fighting was reported still in progress as Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's victorious forces continued to pound back the stubbornly struggling Hermann Goering armored division and other crack Nazi units. The Allies held 3 miles of the Via Casilina.

Nazis Stream Northward

Capture of Valmontone and severance of the Via Casilina drew the Allied sack tighter on the remnants of what once were 12 German divisions holding the Gustav and Hitler lines. Less than 18 miles separated Clark's troops from Canadian forces who pounded up the Via Casilina and seized Ferentoni. Caught between the two Allied wings, Marshal Albert Kesserling's battered forces were streaming northward on several secondary roads toward the temporary safety of a new defense line hinged on Avezzano.

It was disclosed that the crack American First Armored Division and other strong American reinforcements had been thrown into the battle, now raging within sight of Rome. The First Armored Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon, played a conspicuous part in the Tunisian victory last year.

At nightfall a front dispatch reported Fifth Army vanguards were fanning out in a wide arc through the Alban Hills above Velletri, advancing on a mountain front extending from the Appian Way to the Via Casilina—the two principal highways into Rome.

Japs Within 12 Miles of Changsha, Chinese Report

Chunking, June 2 (U.P.) — The semiofficial Chinese Central News Agency reported tonight that the Japanese have driven to within 12 miles of Changsha, key stronghold on the Hankow-Canton railroad, and a high command spokesman warned that the invaders were preparing to throw up to 280,000 men into a gigantic nut-cracker drive to split China in two.

Smashing swiftly southward in Hunan Province, the Japanese, advancing in four columns along a 155-mile front, scored new gains east, west and south of Lake Tungting. The Chinese military spokesman said a battle appeared imminent for Changsha, scene of three previous bloody struggles.

The military spokesman said only 40,000 Japanese were engaged in the current operations in northern Hunan but that another 150,000 troops were concentrated around Hankow, ready to be thrown into the enemy offensive southward.

Once the Japanese gain control of the railroad, they will have split China in two, established a virtually unbroken supply line from Manchuria to the South China Sea, and isolated American air bases within bombing range of Japan.

War Sidelights

Goums Judge All Soldiers By Their Tags

By Kenneth L. Dixon

On the Italian Front, May 26 (Delayed). (AP).—The wild and fanatical fighting Goums of the Fifth Army may not be the best men in the world when it comes to using modern mechanized equipment but they are almost unbeatable in the business of stealth and surprise.

However, in the night they sometimes have difficulty distinguishing between Nazis and Allies without giving away their own positions, since they speak neither German nor English, so they have developed an eerie, nerve-shaking system all their own.

Many an American soldier, slipping along in the darkness, has suddenly been seized from behind by a steely hand around his throat. Then, while he is held unable to breathe or make a sound, the grim Goum will grope at his chest, unbutton his shirt and feel for his dog tags. If they are of proper shape for an American soldier he is released and his captor slips away into the night as silently as he came.

As to what would happen otherwise—well, a lot of Germans with slit throats are found in the hill country these mornings. Which is one reason why the frontline doughboys are taking a great deal more than customary care of their dogtags.

One Way to Tell

This conversation was picked up on a front line radio set tuned in on the fighter plane wavelength:

First voice (apparently a Mustang pilot), "Hey, Joe, see that plane way down there. Looks like a Jerry."

Second voice (obviously from another fighter), "Yeah, sure does, doesn't it?"

Second voice, "Roger."

Third voice suddenly butting in, "Hey, hold it. That ain't no Jerry. It's a P-47."

First and second voices in unison: "How do you know?"

Hitler Withholds Pardon

Adolf Hitler has refused an appeal by a group of high officers, including Col. Gen. von Mackensen, to pardon the former Lieut. Gen. Count Sponeck, who was demoted to the rank of private in February, 1942, the British radio said Friday.

According to the broadcast, reported to the United Press by CBS, Sponeck was demoted by a court-martial presided over by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering when he refused to carry out Hitler's order to hold out on the Kerch Peninsula of the eastern Crimea with the Twentysecond Infantry Division, which he then commanded.

Not One Building Escaped Damage, Eyewitness Says

By Reynolds Packard

Velletri, Italy, June 2 (U.P.).—As I enter this captured town, I step over the bodies of German snipers who were left behind to harass the Fifth Army's advance. There has been a bitter, last-ditch fight here and the signs of it are everywhere.

There are German prisoners, for instance—about 100 of them. For the most part they are a sorry looking lot, sloppily dressed and undernourished. But here and there in their ranks is a man nattily dressed in gray-green woolen cloth. Those men are members of the crack Hermann Goering Division which was hastily brought down from the north in an attempt to stem the roll of the Allied tide toward Rome.

The Germans have drawn on all possible reserves for the defense of this sector. The hodge-podge of prisoners proves that. There are Germans from 45 different companies and six separate divisions among the enemy troops that have fallen into our hands around this town.

The German rear-guard here was under orders to hold until it was killed or captured in an attempt to let the main body of the enemy get a good start along the Appian Way. Snipers were placed in attics, in cellars and at windows.

At 7:30 o'clock last night the town was ours, but the Germans still refused to give up.

Shells continued to fall into Velltri from the surrounding hills this morning.

Velletri has been badly smashed by Allied artillery and there is not a building in it that has not received at least one shell hit. Hundreds of German helmets litter the streets and in the main square—Piazz-la Cairo—there is a large pile of them.

We cover our noses with handkerchiefs as we walk through the town for there are many dead horses in the outskirts and the odor drifts through the town. The number of dead horses still hitched to guns and supply wagons indicates how hard put the Germans are for mechanized material.

ported to Lieut. Connor on the cathedral steps he had his "human radio station," Pfc. Edward Collins, of Portland, Oreg., send this message to headquarters on a walky-talky set:

"Have Valmontone. What next?"

The cathedral was damaged, but still structurally sound. The adjoining palace and many other buildings were hard hit.

A debonairly mustached policeman in a red and blue uniform and a tri-corner hat told me 150 German soldiers were killed by the American air attack on Valmontone May 25.

"After that," he said, "the German commander moved his men outside town."

Just one week ago the Fifth Army's tank spearhead drove from the old beachhead to the outskirts of Valmontone. Since then the Goering division resisted fanatically and held the escape routes open for the German Tenth army retreating from the southern front before the British.

Now our forces are fanning out in the green valley to the north of the Alban hills and a brigadier general said:

"It's true—the Germans are cracking fast."

Born in Washington

Lieut. Frank W. Connor, jr., 34, was born in Washington and after graduation from Central High School in 1927 he spent two years traveling around the world as a seaman on merchant vessels.

However, he returned to this country in 1929 and attended the University of Georgia and later the University of Wisconsin.

He enlisted in the Army in October, 1940, and late in 1942 while under treatment for injuries at Walter Reed Hospital he met Miss Nadine Rolle, of Denver, Colo., then an employe of the Department of Justice.

Three months later in February, 1943, after he had returned to camp, she flew to Mineral Springs, Tex., to marry him and the ceremony was performed at 2:30 a. m. immediately after her arrival. In January of this year a son was born to the couple, whom the father has never seen.

His parents live at 211 East Hamilton st., Silver Spring, with the young mother. The elder Connor is in the Division of Current Information of the Department of Commerce.

Germans had been cut by American forces pushing through the mountains north and northwest upon Rome.

The Nazi commanders threw more and more troops into the battle raging in the Alban Hills immediately before Rome, but these were offset by reinforcements of American and French divisions made available to Clark by the collapse of enemy resistance between Terracina and Littoria, in the coastal sector last week.

The communique said American infantrymen, fighting on Monte Artemisio, 2600-foot peak 2 miles northwest of Velletri, were meeting "very obstinate opposition." Lariano, a highway village midway between Velletri and Valmontone, fell to other American troops.

(A German communique declared that a dent achieved by the Allies northwest of Velletri had been "sealed off" and heavy casualties inflicted on Clark's forces, who scaled Monte Artemisio in a "sneak" advance Tuesday night. It described the fighting in the area as of "very great fierceness.")

Every available Nazi soldier was said to have been tossed into the swirling series of battles both on the heights and in the Alban foothills below, amound Lanuvio and Campoleone, which still were in enemy hands. Enemy parachute troops were encountered in the Velletri area, and elsewhere the Germans were reported using such noncombatant forces as company butchers and horse hostlers.

Enemy Uses Fighter Planes

For the second straight day a number of the Nazis' hoarded fighter planes appeared over the field, diving to strafe Allied shock troops. Every yard of Allied advance was made through a hurricane of artillery fire from the hills, the enemy even using anti-aircraft guns to sweep the dusty terrain.

Allied warships added their salvoes to the struggle as they shelled enemy gun positions opposing the British advance northward from Ardea in the coastal sector.

The busy Allied air force destroyed another 100 German transport vehicles, bringing to more than 4800 the number they have wiped out or demaged since the offensive began May 11.

Allied officers conceded that the Germans were ultizing the utmost skill in their fighting withdrawal before the Eighth Army. Machine-gun nests and snipers mile after mile kept Eighth Army vanguards in check.

Captured Pole Helps to Save Trapped Yanks

By James E. Roper

With the Fifth Army Approaching Albano, Italy, June 2 (U.P.).—A "lost" company of Americans, cut off for 36 hours without food, water or ammunition, turned disaster into a triumph yesterday when, with the aid of a captured Pole who grinned as he slew his Nazi enemies, it fought its way out of a trap, killing 67 Germans and capturing 40.

Capitalizing on their success, the Yanks, commanded by First Lieut. John Myers of Orangeburg, S. C., smashed half a mile onward along the road to Albano.

Separated from other units, the Americans had found themselves far out in front in a sharp salient, where, hemmed in from three sides, they could have been annihilated had the Germans counterattacked.

The "lost" company seized a Pole fighting on the German side when he became separated from his outfit. He offered to help them, showing the Yanks where they could find abandoned German guns and ammunition, and soon they were equipped with 11 Nazi machine guns, 2 mortars, 50 machine pistols, and all the rifles they could use.

Crouching in a ditch, the Pole, who said he had joined the Wehrmacht when the Germans offered him that alternative or the death of his family, then showed the Americans how to operate the weapons.

The "lost" company wiped out 67 Nazis and captured 40 within two hours. Confused by the sound of the clearly-distinguishable German weapons, the Nazis screamed and yelled, apparently thinking they were being fired upon by their own men. Ironically, it later was discovered that the Germans were using American-made Browning automatic rifles.

Typical of the fierce German resistance in this sector, seven officers of one company were killed. Sergt. Leland Woods of Hartshorne, Okla., then took over the command. In this battle, Sergt. James Casey of Roswell, N. Mex., crawled 150 yards over a field swept by German machine guns in order to help an American tank destroyer. When the tank destroyer's crew was unable to spot the enemy machine gun nests, Casey walked in front of them with a Tommy gun, his tracers identifying the targets for the tanks.

Capt. James Donaghey, Abilene, Tex., said three Germans approached the Americans waving a white flag and with their hands up, as if they were surrendering. Suddenly, however, they threw hand grenades into his men, killing two of them.

"The Jerries broke and ran, but we aimed, fired and killed them all," he reported.

First Lieut. John Myers, Orangeburg, S. C., reported that he found a badly wounded German officer, who refused help from American medical aides.

"He said he didn't want to be disgraced by accepting American aid and asked that we let him lie there to die. We obliged."

Australia Bans Tribune Edition

Melbourne, June 2 (AP).—Customs Minister Keane said today the Federal Australian government had refused the Australian agent of Col. Robert R. McCormick, owner of the Chicago Tribune, permission to publish an edition of the Tribune in Australia for U. S. troops.

No reason was given for the rejection.

(In Chicago, Colonel McCormick commented: "It shows that Australia is under a dictatorship as extreme as the dictatorships of Russia and Germany. The United States should insist the Australian people be freed, since the United States saved them from Japan.")

Stilwell Units Knife Deeper Into Myitkyina

Kandy, Ceylon, June 2 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's American and Chinese forces have penetrated 400 yards deeper into the southern part of Myitkyina, while in the northwestern outskirts of the north Burma stronghold other units advanced 1500 yards in the face of stiff opposition, it was announced today.

Americans scored gains north of the city and pushed to within 700 yards of the Jap-held dry weather landing strip.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation said the Allies now hold about half of Myitkyina.)

Plight of Japs Critical

United Press War Correspondent Frank Hewlett reported from Stilwell's headquarters that the plight of the Japanese garrison was becoming more critical daily as the greatly reinforced Allied attackers inched forward steadily, cleaning out the fanatically resisting enemy from pill boxes and other entrenchments.

In the Mogaung Valley, some 40 miles west of Myitkyina, Stilwell's main Chinese forces continued to advance down the motorable road from captured Malakawng, 15 miles north of Kamaing, former Japanese headquarters in northern Burma. Other Chinese troops, who had outflanked Kamaing, were attacking positions 4 miles south of the enemy base.

Chindits Kill 3700 Japs

A communique disclosed, meanwhile, that Maj. Gen. W. D. A. Lentaigne's Imperial Chindits have killed more than 3700 Japanese since they landed behind the Japanese lines in north-central Burma early in March. They are astride Jap communication lines between Mandalay and Myitkyina.

On the Manipur Front, in India, imperial troops supported by artillery captured a Japanese-held village southwest of Imphal. The imperials also pressed strong attacks, supported by planes and artillery, on a Japanese position north of Imphal.

In China's Yunnan, Chinese pressing toward north Burma were stalemated, Chungking said.

Strike Axis Mighty Blow, Tito Tells Serbs

London, June 2 (U.P.).—Disclosing a new attempt by the Germans to enlist the Serbs against the Yugoslav People's Army of Occupation, Marshal Tito, in his second appeal in two days to Yugoslavs to rally behind a common all-out effort against the Axis, today warned the Serbs that the "final hour has struck" for them to rise up and "strike with all your might."

Cautioning the Serbs, who constitute the bulwark of the rival Yugoslav forces led by Gen. Draja Mikhailovic, that they face danger of complete annihilation by the Germans, the Free Yugoslav radio broadcast this message from Tito:

"After all the massacres, shootings, hostages, and other crimes, the Germans now are trying to mobilize six more classes of what is left of the Serbian youth within their reach and throw them into the slave 'volunteer' corps. The final hour has struck for Serbs and for all of us. Serbs, strike now, with all your might. We have nothing to wait for."

King Asks End of Civil War

The latest appeal from the Partisan leader to the Serbs to join forces against the invader came less than 24 hours after King Peter II broadcast a plea to his countrymen to end their civil war and disclosed that Ivan Subasic, his new premier, would go to Bari soon to negotiate with representatives of both Yugoslav camps for a coalition government and possibly bring the opposing forces under an allied command.

Nazis Launch Big Drive

London, June 2 (AP).—The Germans, apparently alarmed at the seriousness of the situation in Yugoslavia and the growing strength of the Partisan army, have launched a large-scale offensive against liberated territory, Marshal Tito declared today.

A broadcast communique from his headquarters said the offensive begun several days ago in western Bosnia with more than three Nazi divisions participating. Air-borne troops as well as infantry and armored units are being employed by the Germans, the bulletin said.

Led by Rommel

Tito Escapes As Germans Capture Base

Bari, Italy, May 29 (delayed (AP). German paratroopers supported by glider-borne infantry swarmed down and captured the Bosnian headquarters of Marshal Tito May 25 but failed by an hour to catch the wily Yugoslav leader, Partisan sources disclosed today.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was said to have directed the attack personally.

Tito escaped along with Maj. Randolph Churchill, son of the British Prime Minister, and virtually all Allied officers attached to Tito's staff.

Two correspondents, Stoyan Pribichevich of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, John Talbot of Reuters, and two photographers were captured, but Pribichevich escaped.

A blistering dive-bombing attack at 6 a. m. preceded the assault on the headquarters in a vast grotto near Drvar, 70 miles north of Split. Paratroopers and gliders followed quickly, coordinating their attack with a powerful ground assault.

German transports and additional gliders poured in more men throughout the afternoon, night and following day.

Tito's Partisans regained much ground the first night but on the second day a Nazi armored column pushed into Drvar. American and RAF planes went to the aid of Tito's men.

The Nazis, it was estimated, used five divisions at least, one a full air-borne division. An American colonel said he counted between 35 and 40 gliders at one phase of the fighting.

Withdrawing into the Dinaric Alps where the Partisans know every goat trail, Tito and his staff had been gone an hour before the first Germans reached the stronghold.

POPE

cial and spiritual consequences threaten to become the scourge of the age to come.

"It is therefore of the greatest importance that this fear should give way to a well-founded expectation of honorable solutions; solutions that are not ephemeral or carry the germs of fresh turmoil and dangers to peace, but are true and durable; solutions that start from the principle that wars, today, no less than in the past, cannot easily be laid to the account of peoples, as such."

The pontiff closed "with the most fervent wish that the grace of Almighty God may cause to break soon over the hills of the Eternal City and over the whole world, the dawn of such a peace."

Approaching the approach of battle toward Rome, the Pope noted that "the threat of air raids on districts not beyond the outer parts of Rome has given way in fact to conduct that shows greater regard," and added:

"We nourish the hope that this more equitable and moderate trend will prevail over the opposing considerations of seeming utility and so-called military exigencies or needs, and that the Eternal City in every eventuality and at all costs, may be saved from becoming a theater of war."

Declaring that Rome was crowded with refugees making problems "which are at times almost insoluble," the Pope remarked that "in few parts of Italy, not to say of the world, is there experienced at the present moment as extensively as in Rome and its environs the want of the necessities of life. . . ."

The Pope declared that "today, in fact, more than ever before, is to be seen by any clear-sighted and honest observer, the sadly deficient balance sheet which cleavages from the church in the course of centuries have effected for Christendom.

". . . How much more efficacious would be the influence of Christian thought and Christian life on the moral substructure of the future plans for peace and social reconstruction, if there were not this vast division and dispersal of religious confessions, that in the course of time have detached themselves from the mother church."

Regarding the position of the Pope, Pius declared:

"Between Christ and Peter there reigns . . . a mysterious but eminently real bond which was effected once in time but which draws its roots from the eternal counsels of the Almighty. . . . The Eternal Father . . . had from all eternity predestined the fisherman of Bethsaida for his singular office. And Christ himself only fulfilled the will of his Father when, promising and conferring the primacy, he used expressions which were to fix forever the uniqueness of Peter's privileged position.

"Those therefore who—as was said (or better, repeated) some time ago by representatives of religious confessions who profess themselves Christian—declare that there is no vicar of Christ on earth because Christ Himself promised to remain with his church as its head and lord to the end of time, besides deriving the whole episcopal office of its foundation, are ignoring and misinterpreting the profound meaning of papal primacy, which is not the negation but the fulfillment of that promise."

The Pope's address, delivered in Italian, was broadcast by the Vatican radio.

Partisan Bandits Active in Spain

The Berlin radio said Friday that "Communist bandits" in Spain were carrying on partisan activities in the mountains near Sevilla and had kidnaped the secretary of an industrial magnate.

According to the broadcast, reported to the United Press by CBS, the partisans had stored large quantities of arms and propaganda leaflets in the mountains, and have been using ransom money to finance underground activities. The kidnaped secretary, the broadcast said, was turned loose a few days ago when a 100,000 peseta ransom was paid.

Nazi Tank Troops Dent Russian Lines

Lose Heavily on Fourth Day of Attack Near Iasi, Reds Say

London, June 2 (AP).—Nazi troops, attacking savagely with large forces of tanks and infantry through the fourth day of their battles in the Moldavian province of Romania, have driven another dent into Russian lines northwest of Iasi, Moscow acknowledged tonight.

"An insignificant wedge" was accomplished by the Germans at the cost of heavy losses in manpower and equipment in a series of blows northwest of the town, the broadcast communique said.

During the day's fighting 25 German tanks were destroyed, "according to preliminary data," the communique stated.

On other sectors of the front, Moscow said, there were no essential changes.

Moscow made no mention of air action in the communique, but earlier the German radio had said that at least 1000 Nazi planes were in action over the Romanian front and, even so, conceded that the Russians held air superiority there.

One Berlin broadcast called the fighting in the Iasi area "exceptionally violent" and declared that the Russians were making strong counterattacks in an effort to regain heights taken previously by the Germans.

Soviet counterattacks in the Kolomea area of the Carpathian foothills and near Vitebsk in White Russia also were related by the German radio.

Berlin Worried

Nazis Fear Allied Drive Into Balkans

London, June 2 (AP).—The Germans expressed fear today that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's cross-Channel blow would be preceded by an invasion of the Balkans from the Middle East.

"Increasingly large Anglo-American troop concentrations in the Middle East countries have been reported from Syria and Lebanon in the last few weeks," said a Berlin radio broadcast dispatch dated Ankara, "and indications are that the invasion of Western Europe may be preceded by a thrust into the Balkan countries."

The United Nations radio at Algiers said the Germans had clamped down a strict martial law on the Peleponesus at the southern top of Greece and the Vichy radio told of increasing sea clashes between Corsica and the southern French coast.

Throughout the uneasy continent the Germans reported a tightening of defenses. The United Nations radio in Algiers said that in Pomerania and East Prussia the Nazis had organized "guerilla detachments to deal with a possible Russian breakthrough."

British Pound Nazi Convoys In Aegean and Off Norway

London, June 2 (AP).—Carrier-borne aircraft of the British fleet last night attacked and damaged a strongly escorted German convoy of three supply ships off Stadtlandet on the west coast of Norway, the Admiralty announced today.

A communique said all three ships were hit and that four escorting antiaircraft vessels were damaged. Two naval fighters were reported lost in the engagement.

A Berlin broadcast said 40 planes attacked and 11 were shot down. It admitted "minor damage" to the convoy.

Since April 3 when the German battleship Tirpitz was attacked in Altenfjord, carrier-borne aircraft have sunk a large heavily laden supply ship and another medium-sized one, the Admiralty said. Eleven other supply ships and one large tanker have been severely damaged and some probably sunk.

Shore installations damaged during these attacks included oil tanks and a fishoil factory northeast of Stadtlandet.

The Admiralty said 11 German planes have been shot down, one probably shot down and two damaged in that period, with 17 British planes lost.

Four Ships Set Afire

Cairo, June 2 (U.P.).—Rounding out two weeks of far-flung attacks against German shipping and harbor installations in the Aegean, Allied Middle East aircraft struck at an important Nazi convoy, leaving four ships in flames and damaging several others, it was announced today.

In intensive attacks during the past two weeks against German shipping, harbors and airfields, Allied planes shot up an airfield at Kalamaki in Greece, raided harbors at Syra, Kalmata, Rhodes and Melos Islands and bombed airfields at Maleme, Kasteli and Petiada in Crete.

Beaufighters set fire to two supply ships being built on the west coast of Greece and, in another attack, left two ships burning at Alimnia Harbor near Rhodes. During all these operations, 10 aircraft are missing.

Leiserson Quits As NMB Head to Teach, Write Book

Copyright, 1944, New York Tribune, Inc.

William M. Leiserson, 61-year-old Esthonian-born economist, has resigned as chairman of the National Mediation Board to accept a visiting professorship at Johns Hopkins University and write a book on labor relations, it was learned yesterday.

The resignation was effective last Saturday. George A. Cook, a member of the three-man board, is acting chairman and it is expected that he will be formally chosen chairman on July 1 when Mr. Leiserson's term normally would have expired. Harry H. Schwartz, the other board member, is understood to have declined the chairmanship.

Disclosure of Leiserson's resignation came after President Roosevelt, at his morning press conference, dropped a remark that he expected to have a story very soon involving the NMB head. Mr. Roosevelt would not elaborate.

5 Area Men Killed, 4 Others Missing

Lieutenant Corpening Identified as Pilot Lost in Plane Crash in Rhode Island

Five Army and Navy men from the Washington area have been killed, and four others are missing in action, it was announced yesterday.

Killed were:

Lieut. (j. g.) Maxwell M. Corpening, jr., USN, 24, whose mother, Mrs. R. A. McGill, lives at 5201 Murray rd., Brookdale, Chevy Chase, Md.

Lieut. James Strickland Swarts, USNR, whose wife lives at 2331 15th st. nw.

Lieut. John P. Cox, USAAF, 23, whose parents live at Burnt Mills Hills, Silver Spring, Md.

Fireman Second Class Henry Ossian Redman, jr., USNR, whose father lives at 1482 Alabama ave. se.

Pvt. Thomas R. Daley, USA, whose wife formerly lived at 2811 South Glebe rd., Arlington, Va.

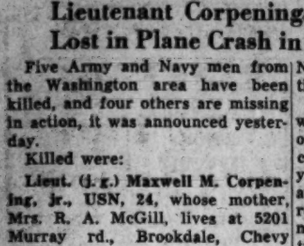
Missing are:

Col. Robert H. Kelly, USAAF, 38, whose wife lives at 5531 Manning dr., Bethesda, Md.

Lieut. Franklin H. Chaimson, USAAF, 28, whose mother lives at 1835 16th st. nw.

Sergt. Dominic G. Leogrande, USAAF, 19, whose mother lives at 3404 Upshur st., Brentwood, Md.

Yeoman Second Class Howard Leonard Dedrick, USNR, whose sister, Mrs. Marvel May Heinrichs, lives at 4926 47th st. nw.



CHAIMSON COX

Lieutenant Corpening was identified yesterday as the pilot killed in Monday's plunge of a plane into Wordens Pond, South Kingstown, R. I., according to the Associated Press.

One Routine Mission

The lieutenant, a fighter pilot training with the Navy Air Corps, was on a routine mission when he crashed. A native of North Carolina, he joined the Royal Canadian Air Force in the fall of 1941 and received his wings and commission in Canada. After several months with the RCAF in England, he transferred to the United States Navy Ferry Command and later to the fighter squadron.

Lieutenant Cox, fighter pilot, was previously reported missing over Rabaul, New Britain, on December 25, 1943, after almost a year's service in the Pacific theater. His father, T. Earl Cox, will receive the lieutenant's posthumous awards of the Air Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Purple Heart at 5:15 p. m. Monday at Bolling Field ceremonies. A former member of the Silver Spring Flying Club, he was graduated from Montgomery Blair High School in 1938.

At Bolling Field Two Years

Colonel Kelly, commander of a bomb group in England, was reported missing over northern France on April 28. A native of Richmond, Ind., he was graduated from West Point in 1928. He came to the Washington area in 1940, when he was assigned to two years of duty at Bolling Field. He was in the office of the assistant chief of air staff, War Department, previous to his overseas assignment last March.

Lieutenant Chaimson, former District policeman and Post circulation manager, was missing over France on April 27. Sent overseas early last month, the Flying Fortress pilot was believed to be on his first mission from an English base when reported missing.

A resident of Washington since a child, he is a graduate of Central High School where he starred in football. He worked up from Post delivery boy to District manager of its circulation department. He patrolled the area of the First Precinct for two years with the Metropolitan Police Department before enlisting in the Air Corps in September, 1942.

Went Overseas in March

Sergeant Leogrande, Flying Fortress gunner stationed in England, was reported missing over Germany on April 29. Born in Washington, he is a graduate of Mount Rainier High School and a former employe of the Columbia Planograph Co. here. Enlisting in the Air Corps in November, 1942, he went overseas last March.

Dedrick, former salesman for the Maryland Electric Co. in Hyattsville, was reported missing early in May. A yeoman in the Navy during the first World War, he served all over the world on the cruiser Pittsburgh. Enlisting again in April, 1942, he began his second tour of sea duty four months later. He is engaged to Miss Charlotte Colburn of Hyattsville, Md.

Registration Of Air Cadets Is Resumed

Registration of 17-year-old boys for the Air Corps Enlisted Reserve was resumed yesterday at the Army Air Forces Examining Board, 1106 New York ave. nw., which has been closed since March 25.

EDWARDS

Recruiting has been reopened to provide airmen for training this fall, the War Department said in announcing that Nationwide recruiting became effective as of June 1.

In Washington, a veteran just back from the Burma-China-India theater who began his Air Force career by registering at the local board office, was assigned to the board as recorder.

He is Capt. Neal J. Edwards, 1736 Queens lane, Arlington, Va., who joined the Air Force February 16, 1943, and returned to this country with the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

He will record registrations of boys under 18 who pass physical and mental tests and wish to continue high school or jobs until they are 18 as well as those less than 17 years and 9 months old who will take college training.

Captain Edwards, 22, enlisted in the Air Force after being graduated from McKinley High and attending the University of Maryland two years.

He was sent to Asia as pilot of a B-17 medium bomber and spent 376 hours in combat on 62 missions.

His two most narrow escapes:

1. Weather forced the plane back from a "sea sweep" and radio aids went out of commission. Out of gas, Captain Edwards crash-landed on a dirt road. "Two Chinese were in sight as we circled, but about 500 were there when we landed, all grinning," he said.

The plane was wrecked but not the Americans. They got back to base with the help of a Chinese guide.

2. While laying a bomb aboard a Jap freighter, he ran into the rigging of the ship and ripped out the bottom of his plane without hitting either propeller. "The Japs must have been eating lunch," he said, "because no one was in sight until the bomb exploded. Then they poured out on deck and over the side as another plane dropped two more bombs and sank the vessel."

Captain Edwards was married a few days ago to Virginia J. Hutchinson who was graduated from the University of Maryland in December.

civilian population during that period.

The committee in its report to Congress explained that UNRRA will take up where the Army leaves off in providing for the civilian population.

The Army program contemplates providing minimum ration of food if the local production is insufficient, a very limited ration of clothing, necessary medical supplies, a small quantity of equipment for transportation purposes and for the repair of utilities in the larger cities and some other essential civilian supplies.

The Army to date has distributed 75 million dollars in essential civilian supplies in Italy, including Sicily, but has been reimbursed for those expenditures by the Italian government.

Sicily, Clay disclosed, is under local civilian government now, and civilian agencies like UNRRA will shortly take over the task of providing for the population.

"The primary job of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will be to take care of the immediate relief needs of the liberated populations after the areas are recaptured by the Allied armies and restored to some measure of civilian control," the committee report said, adding that UNRRA did not contemplate long-range reconstruction.

Restoration of agricultural production, repairs to public utilities and to plants which produce clothing and process food will all be within the tasks of UNRRA.

"The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation expects to receive local currency for the bulk of the goods which it provides to liberated areas. These receipts will be used to pay local costs of United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration operations and to purchase locally any supplies that might be used in other liberated areas; they will not be returned to the contributing countries," the committee said.

Nazi Greed Kills 9 Out Of 10 Babies in Greece

Nine out of every 10 new-born infants in Greece die because the Nazi army has confiscated nearly all the food as well as medical supplies, Leo T. Crowley, Chief of the Foreign Economic Administration, told the House Appropriations Committee in hearings yesterday.

Federal Travel Cost Declared Far Too High

People on Government business still are traveling 300 to 400 million miles a year, the Byrd Economy Committee declared yesterday, and burning 20 to 30 million gallons of gas.

Progress toward cutting down such travel, it added, is "neither substantial nor impressive."

The committee, a joint Senate-House group with Treasury and Budget Bureau representation and headed by Senator Byrd (D., Va.), continued:

"It is apparent that the Federal Government is in the position of urging the State governments and its citizens to cut down drastically on the use of automobiles, the consumption of gasoline and tires, while its own record is not as good as it might be."

Even in law enforcement and war agencies, the committee said in a report filed in the Senate, there should be increased effort to reduce the number of cars owned and miles traveled.

And there is "nothing special" about the work of other agencies, it added, that would not permit "drastic reductions."

These are some of the figures on which the committee based its reasoning:

At the end of the last fiscal year, the Government, exclusive of the War and Navy Departments, owned 19,161 passenger cars—1856 more than at the close of the previous year.

It cost $3,941,477, including the price of 11,981,477 gallons of gasoline, to operate these cars 190,778,000 miles during the last year. Compared with the previous year, the cost was down $301,826, gallonage 1,812,117 and mileage 12,772,280.

In addition, the Government pays employes on a mileage basis when they use their private cars on official business. Figures for last year were not cited, but during the 1942 fiscal period the Government spent $7,261,856 for 145,606,241 miles.

House Group Approves Bill To Keep OPA

By Christine Sadler

After defeating a modified "Bankhead amendment" that would have provided special price treatment for the textile industry, the House Banking and Currency Committee yesterday voted favorably on legislation to extend wartime price controls for a year beyond June 30.

Representative Paul Brown (D., Ga.), a committee member, said he would attempt to have the amendment inserted when the bill reaches the floor, possibly next week.

The special textile provision is in the bill as approved by the Senate Banking Committee and scheduled for consideration on the Senate floor Monday.

Pressing for speed on completion of price-control legislation, House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., declared there would be no adjournment of Congress for the conventions unless members acted with dispatch.

He wants action completed by June 10 so that a 10-day period would be allowed if the measure should be vetoed, which is conceded to be definite should the textile provision win through both houses.

Leaders of both parties are agreed that OPA will be extended in some form. Except for textile pricing, the House and Senate bills are not too radically different.

The House committee agreed that present food subsidies should be continued, but that there should be no expansion. The Senate bill specifies that the only money spent for subsidies should be appropriated by Congress directly for that purpose.

The House measure would liberalize court procedures under price control, erasing the present 60-day limit for challenging the legality of an OPA order.

The committee voted down an amendment which would have given OPA authority to put price ceilings on such personal services as haircuts, manicures, hairdos, facials and shaves.

Two Fliers From District Area Win Additional Decorations

Oak Leaf Clusters to the Air Medal have been awarded to two Army Air Force lieutenants from the Washington area, it was learned yesterday.

CARR

The men are Lieut. Joseph E. Carr, whose mother lives at the Park Lane Apartments, 21st st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., and Lieut. Harold E. Reich, whose mother resides at 4 Groveton rd., Alexandria, Va.

Lieutenant Carr, 25-year-old Liberator bombardier, was decorated for achievement on sustained combat operation missions in the South Pacific area where he has been serving since January.

A member of the National Guard while a student at Indiana University, he enlisted in the Air Corps in June, 1942.

Lieutenant Reich, pilot on an Eighth Air Force Flying Fortress, received the Oak Leaf Cluster award for achievement during heavy bombardment missions over enemy-occupied Europe. Before entering the service, the 21-year-old flier was employed as a parts salesman for Herby's Inc., in Alexandria.

Council Leader to Talk

The Rev. J. Lloyd Black, director of the Christian Church Council of the Capital area, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. at Wilson Boulevard Christian Church, 3850 Wilson blvd., Arlington.

Joint Chiefs of Staffs Ask 'Efficiency' Study of Merger

By Cecil B. Dickson
Gannett National Service

The United States Joint Chiefs of Staffs, in a secret statement of policy on the projected unification of the Army, Navy and Air Forces to the secretaries of War and Navy, have proposed creation of a special joint committee to answer this basic question:

"What is the organization which will provide the most effective employment of our military resources in time of war and their most efficient preparation for war, in time of peace."

3 Basic Systems

The committee, to be composed of two Army and two naval officers, would be directed to "solve the current problems of unwarranted duplication" within the present Army and Navy organizations, and to make a "thorough examination of the relative advantages, disadvantages and practicability of the following basic systems of organization:

"(1) Two departments—War and Navy.

"(2) Three departments—War, Navy, Air.

"(3) One department of war (or of defense.)

The statement, dated May 19 of this year, and signed by Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy—President Roosevelt—is titled "Reorganization of National Defense." It has been transmitted to the Special House Postwar Military Committee.

This committee, headed by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (D., Va.) and Representative James W. Wadsworth of New York, ranking Republican, has before it recommendations from the War Department for merger of the armed services, but the Navy thus far has resisted consolidation.

Approved Statement May 9

The joint chiefs of staffs approved the statement of policy on May 9, 10 days before it was submitted to the War and Navy chiefs. The statement pointed out that a year ago studies were begun to:

"Develop the organization and coordination of our military services so as to eliminate unwarranted duplication and to most effectively fight the war.

"Obtain ultimately the most efficient practicable organization of those parts of the executive branch of our Government which are primarily concerned with national defense."

Despite this study by special Army-Navy committees, no plan could be agreed upon. In fact, there was wide disagreement.

and the Low Countries.

Seven heavy bombers failed to return from the day's second mission on variety of targets west and southwest of Paris. Again no enemy fighters were met but flak was heavy over some targets. Among these were the rail junction and a rail bridge at Manay-Falaiseau, and the junctions of Juriay and Acheres, in the city's southwestern suburbs.

Simultaneously with the day's first heavy bomber attack from Britain, Italy-based U. S. Fifteenth Air Force heavy bombers and fighters blasted five rail centers in Hungary and Romania in direct support of the Red army.

(Presumably it was part of this group that flew on to Russia.)

Up to 1000 Fortresses and Liberators, shepherded by some 500 Mustang, Lightning and Thunderbolt fighters, made the first attack on the French coast a few hours after RAF night bombers blasted a rail center and coastal defense in France and an objective in Denmark.

No Planes Lost

The great U. S. fleet of heavy bombers and fighters returned safely to Britain. Not a plane was lost and no enemy fighters attempted to break up the mighty assault.

Up to 750 Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by a similar number of American fighters, simultaneously made their most widespread attacks against Nazi communications in southeastern Europe, hammering five rail junctions not previously attacked by the Mediterranean-based U. S. Fifteenth Air Force.

Support Soviet Armies

In direct aid to Soviet armies reported to be massing for great land drives into Poland and Romania, the Italy-based American fliers hit Cluj, 200 miles northwest of Bucharest, and Simeria, 80 miles north-northeast of the Danube's Iron Gate. Both cities are in Romania.

In Hungary, the United States air fleets hammered Miskolcz, 100 miles northeast of Budapest; Szolnok, 55 miles east-southeast, and Szeged, five miles from the junction of the Yugoslavia, Romanian and Hungarian frontiers.

The American attack on Szolnok followed a heavy predawn blow against the city's rail yards by Italy-based RAF Halifaxs, Lancasters and Wellingtons. One German night fighter was shot down.

Britain-based RAF heavy night bombers bombed the important Saumur rail junction on the Tours-Nantes route for the second time in two nights. They were unchallenged except for a few German night fighters. Speedy Mosquitoes ranged north to attack an unspecified target in Denmark. In addition, mines were laid in German shipping lanes. All the British planes returned.

The Gallup Poll

Strong Sentiment Revealed For Stiffer Manpower Rules

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 2.—Further proof of the public's desire to take sterner measures to correct wartime manpower shortages and labor turnover is revealed in the reaction of the country toward the Bailey-Brewster "work or be drafted" bill.

This proposal, regarded as a substitute for the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill, would make it necessary for a man of draft age in a war job to get permission from his draft board to quit his job. Failure to do so would, under the terms of the bill, make him subject to the draft.

The purpose of the legislation is, of course, to try to reduce the phenomenal amount of labor turnover which still exists in war production areas in spite of War Manpower Commission regulations. Senators Bailey and Brewster feel that legislation is needed to supplement those regulations.

The attitude of the public is in marked contrast to the apathy which is reported in Congress toward the work-or-fight proposal. National sentiment was measured by the Institute on the following issue:

"A law has been proposed which would require every man of draft age in a war job to get permission from his draft board before he can quit his present job. If he quits without permission, he would be subject to draft into the Army. Do you think this law should be passed?"

The vote:

Think law should be passed	56%
Think law should not be passed	32
No opinion	12

In contrast to the vote throughout the country as a whole, two groups which would be especially affected by the law are about evenly divided in their opinion on the issue. These two groups are labor union members and all men under 38 years of age. In each of the two groups approximately as many oppose the bill as favor it.

There is substantial sentiment also for another proposal recently made which would draft 4-F's for jobs in war plants in order to release able-bodied men in those plants for military service. A recent survey found 78 per cent of the Nation's voters in favor of that proposal — evidence again of the desire for stern measures to cope with manpower problems.

The present findings are consistent with the public's attitude all along toward the question of a national service law. Since as far back as March, 1942, the majority of voters have time and again been found in favor of such legislation, in the event of need.

sticks to his present job will not be affected by the new regulations, McNutt said. Workers who seek new employment will be "exposed" to new jobs in order of their importance to the war effort, he said.

Broad discretion was lodged in regional and area WMC offices to adapt the program to local needs.

Quick extension of the new program to cover Washington which is listed as a Group 1 acute shortage area is expected. Essential employers locally probably will be empowered by the USES to do their own hiring as long as they conform with WMC regulations. Less essential employers will be asked to come to the USES to get labor. Employment ceilings probably will be set for local establishments in accordance with demonstrated needs for manpower.

Wide Variation in Choice

McNutt pointed out that there may be "wide variation" in the amount of choice given male workers under the program.

In labor shortage areas where certain war industries must have help to meet critical production schedules, a man's choice of jobs may be severely limited, McNutt said. In other areas, where more labor is available, there probably will be greater freedom of choice, McNutt said.

"On the basis of the stringency of the labor market situation and the urgency of production in the local area, and subject to fair and reasonable standards, an area priority referral program may provide for limiting the number of jobs offered a worker, exclusive of those jobs which the worker has good cause for refusing," McNutt said.

Field instructions issued by McNutt provide that workers may be referred to less essential jobs under the "priority referral" system when:

1. The worker is not needed for any essential jobs in the area;
2. The worker is not able to accept essential jobs outside the area; or
3. There is undue hardship or special emergency circumstances or other good cause which prevent the acceptance of an essential job.

Liberal Use Expected

The authority in the program to permit referral by "arrangement" with the USES is expected to be used liberally to avoid throwing too great a burden on the employment service which is already hard pressed.

McNutt explained that "arrangements" may include placements through union hiring halls, by colleges and universities, and other normal employment channels, even by local volunteer committees. Where an employer complies with the WMC requirements with respect to ceilings, etc., he may be allowed to continue his own hiring indefinitely.

Existing WMC regulations requiring workers to secure statements of availability from their old employer or the USES before leaving an essential job remain in effect, McNutt said.

McNutt said that recruiting of able-bodied males is "especially difficult" for foundries and forge shops, rubber and tire production, ship repair, logging and lumbering, and that "similar acute shortages are developing" in textile manufacturing, manufacture of electronic equipment (including radar) and in coal mining.

Vital to War Supplies

"The ability of these industries to produce on schedule is absolutely vital to the continuing supply of our armed forces."

The new program was discussed with area and regional management-labor policy committees and with WMC's national management-labor committee prior to issuance. The national committee approved it unanimously after securing a modification providing for consultation with area and regional management-labor committees before applying the priority referral plan "to the degree necessitated by regional and national manpower demands."

Thus, field instructions issued by McNutt provided that certain employers or certain communities may be exempt from the "priority referral" phase of the program by regional directors: (1) Where the establishment has less than eight employes, (2) for outlying communities where the results obtained from the program would not warrant its operation, and (3) in other cases on recommendation of the management-labor committees of the region and area.

Other exemptions may be made with McNutt's approval.

Overoptimism Blamed

A "primary reason" for the present manpower problem of "critical and vital industries," is "overoptimism with respect to an early ending of the war" by management and labor.

"This sentiment is positively dangerous to the whole war effort," he said.

"It leads all too many workers to move out of essential war production or refuse to move into necessary war jobs, in the hope of getting themselves set in civilian postwar employment. This attitude of employers and workers is already alarming in certain areas, and if persisted in, will become the gravest sort of threat to the war effort."

McNutt expressed the belief that the contemplated controls will prove even more important after the collapse of Germany, even though the War Production Board has said that a 35 per cent drop in war production will follow.

"With the collapse of Germany, everybody will think the war is over," McNutt said. "Why, then, we'll have to intensify activity on the West Coast."

He pointed out that workers released by cutbacks in some areas are "sorely needed" in other areas.

McNutt acknowledged that the success of the new program would depend on the degree to which employers and workers accepted it.

Although WMC has authority to ask for sanctions under the Stabilization Act when job shifts are made in defiance of its regulations, McNutt indicated that they were not anxious to make use of them.

He pointed out that a worker who refuses to accept offered jobs might find himself without employment, while employers refusing to "play the game" might be without workers.

"To the greatest degree consistent with the war needs," McNutt said, "workers subject to priority referral shall be given the maximum possible freedom of choice as to the jobs they accept. Employers also shall be given the maximum possible freedom of choice as to the workers they employ."

The term "controlled referral" which referred to the program restricting the hiring of male workers in about a dozen communities was officially "eliminated" because of resentment that developed to the "control feature."

"We are in the most vital period of the war," McNutt said. "The successful conduct of the war now requires the channeling of all available male labor in the Nation to jobs of greatest war-production urgency, and the retention of labor in those jobs.

"We proposed to do this by a system of priority referral, effective throughout the Nation, but varying among communities by such adaptations as may be found desirable after consultation with appropriate management-labor committees.

"The plan will make it possible for a worker anywhere in the country to take his most useful place on the industrial firing line. This is just as important as it is for us to get our soldiers onto the firing line when and where they are needed most."

of Kunze's address but pointed out at the time of his visit he was not the bundesfuehrer but the propaganda officer of the national bund.

Another revelation by Gissibl was that Pelley's Silver Shirts and his bundsmen saw much of one another at meetings either at "Haus Fatherland" or the place where the Silver Shirts met.

In addition to the visits of the American bund leaders, the Chicago bund headquarters, the witness said, also was a mecca for Nazi propaganda specialists that came from Germany with messages direct from the propaganda front. He named among these visitors a Dr. Goetz whom he identified as director of the Nazi foreign department in Stuttgart; a Dr. Moshack, director of the American section of the German Foreign Institute, and a Mr. Nagel from Karlshrue. Only the message of Dr. Goetz was brought out in the testimony, and it was, according to Gissibl, "the progress made under Hitler" coupled with an explanation of "the philosophy of national socialism."

Continued obstructionist tactics by defense lawyers precluded the Government from getting admitted into evidence more than one additional exhibit—a photostatic copy of an article published in the Deutscher Weckruf, official organ of the bund, July 23, 1936. The purpose of this exhibit was to show that defendant Schwinn signed, as the bund's Western leader, a message to Hitler, which was accompanied by more than $3000 in "crisp new American $100 bills," a bund delegation took to Berlin in 1936 as a contribution to the German "winter relief fund."

The Weckruf article listed in the delegation several bund leaders including Fritz Kuhn, who at that time was the boundesfuehrer.

To establish the accuracy of an English translation of the Weckruf article relating to the $3000 gift to Hitler, the prosecution placed on the witness stand the man who translated it—Elias D. Rees, an FBI agent who had studied the German language both at the University of Berlin and the University of Utah. He also said he had traveled extensively before the war in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and other European countries as a missionary for the Mormon Church. Many of the defense attorneys subjected him to an extensive cross-examination. Laughlin asked him if he was interested in the sedition case. The FBI agent replied he was interested in "seeing a conviction if the men are guilty."

Laughlin immediately made a verbal motion for a mistrial, but it was promptly denied by Justice Eicher.

A few minutes later, Laughlin shot this question at Rees:

"During the time you were in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, were you acting as a spy?"

"No, sir," thundered the FBI agent.

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher announced as soon as he convened court denial of a motion offered by James J. Laughlin, attorney for two of the defendants, calling for the taking of depositions from Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, commanders of America's armed forces in Hawaii at the time of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. He said the motion failed to set forth any facts to show that the testimony of the two officers would be "relevant to any issues" in the trial.

CIO Pledges Support to Bill For Permanent FEPC Setup

The Congress of Industrial Organizations yesterday indorsed legislation to create a permanent commission to prevent unfair employment practices as necessary to thwart postwar "confusion and strife."

This condition, James B. Carey, national CIO secretary-treasurer, told the House Labor Committee, would result from "discharging workers in wholesale lots for no better reason than that they are black, brown, Catholic or Jewish."

The committee continued hearings on several bills to set up a permanent commission of seven members to carry on the program started by the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Job Crisis Seen

"Without the proper safeguards," Carey declared, "job discrimination will not only continue in the postwar period, but in all probability will be even more serious in its effects than it is today."

Ernesto Galarza, chief of the labor section of the Pan American Union, complained primarily of discrimination against Mexican workers.

Axis agents, Galarza claimed in a statement submitted to the committee, "are constantly stressing discrimination against Mexicans as a means of stirring up ill feeling on the part of the peoples of Latin America toward the United States."

Meanwhile, Senator Hill (D., Ala.) joined other Southern Senators in calling for abolition of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

"The FEPC, instead of being helpful, has undoubtedly stirred up strife and done harm throughout the South," Hill told a reporter. "I shall oppose its continuance when the matter comes before the Senate."

Roosevelt Defends FEPC

President Roosevelt said at his news conference yesterday he wished somebody could tell him how he could possibly give more support to the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

The question came up when a reporter told the Chief Executive there were reports around Congress that the Administration is not giving full support to the FEPC.

LAUGHLIN

Sanders had visited the Florida prison on September 25, 28 and 30, 1941. The statement continued:

"Mr. Chapman told me he remembered talking to him (Sanders) on one of these three occasions but he was not certain on which occasion. Mr. Chapman agreed to testify at the trial and did so testify, producing his records.

"Sanders was convicted and sentenced to 20 years in prison. He is now in the Federal prison at Atlanta. I understand that some months later a guard at the Florida prison admitted he had altered the record as to the visit on September 25 and that in fact Sanders was not there on the 25th but was there on September 28 and 30."

Laughlin then denied he had anything to do with the records "if the records were altered or manipulated."

"Coming at this time this smells to high heaven . . . you can't blame me," Laughlin said and then made the motion for the mistrial which was denied.

The attorney was admitted to the District bar in 1930, coming here from Indiana, where he was originally admitted to the bar.

Garage Joins In Greyhound WLB Defiance

The Washington Greyhound Garage, an affiliate of the Greyhound Bus Lines, yesterday joined the striking men of Local 1098 in defying a War Labor Board back-to-work, nondiscrimination directive and officials of all three—garage, union and bus line—were ordered to appear before a WLB hearing this morning.

This development, which threatens once again a complete tie-up of all Greyhound lines east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio River, came early yesterday morning, just before a scheduled hearing at which Local 1098 was to "show cause" why Government penalties should not be invoked against it for noncompliance with the order.

L. C. Major, vice president of the garage, where striking maintenance workers first walked out eight days ago, sent this message to George W. Taylor, acting WLB chairman:

"The company . . . feels compelled to inform you that they cannot accept the condition of your wire . . . that the company take back all persons desiring to return to work . . . without discrimination because of their participation in the strike.

"The company has the responsibility for the operation of its property as a common carrier facility and must retain the directive control of its employes. . . .

Transit Council Reconsider

"The condition which you impose denies the company the duty of holding employes responsible for failure of service."

Its immediate result was that the Joint Transit Council (Amalgamated Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, AFL) at once reentered the strike picture. Presidents of its 14 affiliated locals, covering the Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound Lines, had earlier disassociated themselves from the striking garage workers and backed the WLB return-to-work order.

But with Major's latest move, Rolla Anderson, Transit Council chairman, said, "This puts a different complexion on things." The local heads therefore, will continue to meet in the Annapolis Hotel for a possible system-wide strike vote in sympathy with the garage workers.

Today's hearing will bring Greyhound officials, including L. C. Battershell, Pennsylvania Greyhound's divisional manager, together with union leaders and the WLB for the first time. The hearing scheduled yesterday morning was postponed, also, because Clark K. Dorsey, president of Local 1098, wired he would not be able to attend.

People's Peace Move Urged By Socialists

By D. Harold Oliver

Reading, Pa., June 2 (AP).—A new Leftist political alignment in the United States dedicated to an early and lasting "peoples' peace" as opposed to "unconditional surrender" or "total victory," and to a halt in "the flight from the Atlantic Charter" was demanded today by Maynard C. Krueger, national chairman of the Socialist Party.

In a keynote address to the party's national convention, which will adopt a platform tomorrow and nominate a presidential ticket Sunday, Krueger also called for immediate socialization of Government-owned war plants as a first step to putting the Nation's wealth in the people's hands and to guarantee employment to war veterans.

The only convention fight in prospect is on the "peace plank" in the platform to be debated on the floor tomorrow morning.

"Hunger and Hate Growing"

On this point, young Krueger, the party's vice presidential candidate in 1940, declared today:

"The prolongation of the war on its present terms is leading away from rather than toward lasting peace. Hunger and hate are growing rapidly throughout Europe. . . .

"We do not want our country to use its armed forces in an impossible attempt to restore Europe as a capitalist system which will not work even here where it has the best chance in the world. We do not want an American Navy used to restore the white man's empires in the Pacific or in Africa. . . ."

Sees New Alignment

The party chairman declared: "Political life on the left in this country is in bad shape," but he added:

"When the New Deal is as dead in people's minds as it has been in fact for several years, when it is apparent to the people that the New Deal was merely the same old capitalism with some relief and social insurance for which we Socialists did the political spadework, when it is evident even to timid leaders that the honeymoon is over, then there is going emerge a new political alignment."

Technicians' Aid Sought in Murder

Danbury, Conn., June 2 (U.P.).—Police asked laboratory technicians today to help solve the months' old murder of a slim, brown-haired young woman whose body was found buried in a shallow grave beneath the ruins of a summer cottage which apparently had been burned by the killer in an effort to conceal the crime.

The technicians found silver fillings in several of the victim's teeth, and were hopeful that her identity could be established from the records of the dentist who did the work. Police said they were certain the woman had been shot in the head and her body buried in the cellar of the cottage before it burned last September 21.

Biddle Hails Ruling Freeing WLB Orders of Court Review

Pointing to its effect on the Montgomery Ward property seizure controversy, Attorney General Francis Biddle last night stressed the importance of yesterday's Court of Appeals decision which held that orders of the War Labor Board are not subject to court review.

The appeals tribunal upheld the action of the District Court in dismissing a complaint brought by the Employers Group of Motor Freight Carriers, Inc., an association representing some 300 trucking companies operating in the New England States.

The association had asked the courts to set aside a WLB order granting wage increases and compensation for overtime work, claiming the order would result in irreparable injury to employers affected.

"The decision has peculiar interest in light of the fact that the McCarran report expressed the view that the Attorney General was in error in stating that all peaceful processes for the settlement of the Ward dispute had been exhausted at the time he advised the President of his right to take possion of the property," asserted Biddle.

He branded some of the criticism in the same report as "hazardous judgment." Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) headed a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that sharply censured Biddle's ruling leading to the seizure.

Justice Henry W. Edgerton wrote the opinion in which Justices Justin Miller and Thurman Arnold concurred, stating that, "It is clear and undisputed that no statute authorizes review of the War Labor Board's orders. As we point out below, the legislative history of the War Labor Disputes Act implies a positive intention that the orders should not be reviewed. Aside from that important and probably conclusive fact, the question is whether general principles of equity authorize review. We think they do not."

The court defended the function of the WLB outlining its history and purpose. Justice Edgerton quoted one of the coauthors of the bill, which provided for the WLB, saying, "For the duration of the war it would be in the best interests of the country to permit the WLB to function without the right to apply to the courts for legal sanctions and without being subject to court review of its decisions. It is an emergency measure and we do not care to invite appeal to the court and delays."

With that purpose in mind, all provisions for enforcement or review were omitted, the court pointed out.

The Freight Carriers Association asked in their original suit for an injunction to prevent enforcement of WLB orders granting (1) a $2.75 wage raise per week to employes, (2) time and a half for all work performed in excess of eight hours in a regular workday and (3) straight-time pay for employes not working on holidays designated.

Biddle concluded, "one more point of interest in the decision is the court's answer to the argument that the President might take over the facilities involved in the case if the WLB order was not accepted. The court responded that neither the broad constitutional power nor the broad statutory power of the President to take propery in furtherance of the war effort depends upon any action of the WLB."

One Government attorney promptly interpreted the decision as placing the Government in position to ask dismissal of every action brought against the board. Among these are five in U. S. District Court here by Montgomery Ward for injunctions against enforcement of WLB orders.

The employers' group has 90 days in which to petition the Supreme Court for review.

Slayer of 5 Attacks Death Guard, Is 'Gassed'

Salt Lake City, June 2 (INS).—Austin Cox, the mass killer of five persons at Ogden, Utah, who faces execution before the firing squad on June 19, was subdued with tear gas today after he attacked a guard in the prison's death row with a knife made from a sharpened spoon handle. Guard Lester H. Gogle suffered a gouged lip.

Cox was sentenced to die for killing an Ogden judge and four other persons when he went on a shooting rampage after the judge had granted a divorce to the prisoner's wife.

Indiana GOP Rejects Proposal To Pledge 29 Votes to Dewey

Indianapolis, June 2 (AP).—The Indiana Republican convention today rejected a proposal that the State's 29 delegates to the national convention be instructed for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as the party's presidentia' nominee.

Representative Gerald W. Landis of the Seventh District offered the motion to instruct for Dewey. It was defeated by a thunderous negative on a voice vote.

Homer E. Capehart, Indianapolis and Washington (Ind.) industrialist, was nominated for United States Senator by the convention.

James E. Tucker of Paoli, former Secretary of State, and Capehart's only opponent, moved that Capehart's selection be made unanimous as county after county jumped on the Capehart bandwagon.

Gates for Governor

Capehart was the sponsor of the Midwest "cornfield conference" of Republicans held on his Daviess County farm in 1931.

Ralph H. Gates, Columbia City attorney and former Republican State chairman, was selected by acclamation as the Republican nominee for Governor. He was unopposed.

The delegates met immediately after the State convention adjourned and elected Robert W. Lyons, Indianapolis attorney and a Dewey enthusiast, and Mrs. Cecil M. Harden of Covington as national committeeman and national committeewoman.

They replaced Ernest M. Morris of South Bend, a Bricker supporter, and Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds of Cambridge City, who directed women's activities at Wendell L. Willkie's headquarters prior to his withdrawal from the Presidential campaign.

The convention declared "our Federal executive . . . has usurped the rights of the States and of the people in an ever-mounting greed for power until now we find ourselves at the very threshold of Socialism."

"There is but one way to end all such abuses," the party continued in a 21-page platform. "We must defeat the New Deal in this (November) election."

Maryland Democrats Meet

By the Associated Press

The possible fourth term candidacy of President Roosevelt was not mentioned as the Maryland Democratic convention at Baltimore chose an uninstructed delegation of 24 delegates to the party's national convention in Chicago in July.

But the convention adopted unanimously a resolution indorsing the Roosevelt Administration and said it was obvious continuance of a Democratic national Administration "offers the best insurance for the steady completion of the war."

Kansas Democrats meet to name their 16 national convention delegates today.

A dozen States have yet to choose Democratic delegates, but the national convention does not start until July 19, three and a half weeks after the Republicans meet on June 26 to nominate their candidate.

Prince Georges Gets Ordnance Laboratory

A four-million-dollar permanent naval ordnance laboratory, which will furnish employment for an estimated 700 persons, will be constructed in Prince Georges County, according to an announcement made yesterday.

At the same time Senators George L. Radcliffe and Millard E. Tydings (Democrats-Md.), announced the Navy had approved an allocation of $169,300 for naval shore establishments in Maryland which will include construction of a deep water well and the extension of the water plant at the Naval Academy.

According to Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), the laboratory will be constructed on the Old Bladensburg rd. on the western side of the northwest branch of the Anacostia River. He said the Navy had assured him the plant would be neither objectionable nor dangerous to the surrounding neighborhood.

Sasscer said the plant would increase the assessable basis of Prince Georges County with the building of needed housing units and would greatly assist local business in that area.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Summer Film Parade Forms on 13th St.; Amusement Gossip

WE CAN'T SPECIFY DATES, because there is no telling how many of the pictures will enjoy extended runs, or for how long, but it is reliably reported by the fellows who did it that the Earle Theater has inked in its feature screen attractions for the summer—if that is what you have been worrying about.

JANET BLAIR

From this distance, it is a likely looking list that will run chronologically as follows:

Following Cecil B. De Mille's Technicolor "Story of Dr. Wassell," will come "Uncertain Glory," in which Errol Flynn is said to offer one of his top performances, in association with Paul Lukas and Warner Brothers' newest discovery, Jean Sullivan. A man-hunt that promises to turn your hair into bristles.

Jack Carson, Jane Wyman and Irene Manning will come next in "Make Your Own Bed," described as "a perfectly ridiculous story, based on an absolutely screwy idea."

Columbia Pictures then will edge in with Cary Grant and Janet Blair in "Once Upon a Time," relating a comic story that is so rich in the element of surprise that nobody who knows will divulge what it is all about. That high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Columbia division manager, insists this is the finest comedy his company has ever made. That would be pretty good!

"The Mask of Dimitrios," scheduled next, will involve Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Zachary Scott and Faye Emerson in a series of flashbacks designed to compound one of the iciest of the mysteries.

No Longer a "Road Show"

At this point, the Warners have set their hearts on returning "The Adventures of Mark Twain," starring Fredric March and Alexis Smith, to the 13th st. screen as a regular attraction, at usual scale of prices.

Writing a period to the catalogue, in its present installment, will come Paramount's "And the Angels Sing," with Dorothy Lamour, Fred MacMurray, Betty Hutton, Diana Lynn and Mimi Chandler, daughter of Kentucky's Senator "Happy" Chandler, on the crest of the cast. The boys are throwing the book at this one as the screen's most luscious lunacy.

That ought to get you practically up to Labor Day, give or take a day or two.

If the National Theater were pressed to find a suitable label for the current week of "Let's Face It," one suspects that "Hollywood Reunion Week" could be made to do in a pinch. The presence of Benny Rubin in the cast is at the bottom of the whole thing. Long one of Hollywood's most popular comedians, Rubin so far has been visited backstage by six famous motion picture directors now in uniform and either stationed or transient in Washington. They are Col. Frank Capra, a third-rower at Monday night's opening; Col. David Backus, Col. Samuel Marshall, Maj. Anthony Veiller, Capt David Miller and Capt. Bud Adler. If Benny's right arm seems to have gone limp, it's probably from saluting.

Ted Tiller, hitting a new high as star of Catholic University's prevalent production of Walter Kerr's "Sing Out, Sweet Land," is leaving the old home town on Monday to go into rehearsal for a season of old-time melodrama revivals, opening in New York on June 13. Bibi Osterwald and Natalie Core, two other Capital favorites, also will be in the company. More of this later—unless Ted forgets to keep his promise. Never has yet.

Syncopating the Sacrosanct

For the first time in the history of the Watergate, Impresario Al Sherman has just been reminding me, that more or less sanctified citadel of symphonic music will resound to the purely American rhythms of "hot" jazz, as interpreted by Art Hodes, "king of the blues pianists," upon the opening of the riverside season next Friday night, under the auspices of the Washington Cooperative Bookshop and Ted Zittel.

Costarring with Hodes in something that has been denominated "Stars Under the Stars," will be Pearl Primus, the sensational "Tom-Tom Terpsichore," and Richard Dyer-Bennet, "The Twentieth Century Minstrel," whose songs are a little in the nature of a revival of the "hot tunes" of the Elizabethan era.

In reviewing Hodes' recording of "Indiana," a modern musical pundit recently had this to say, if you can make it out: "Piano-men should dig a very interesting trick that Hodes pulls here. It's an old honky-tonk gag and works well, though I'll never understand why. He plays all four beats with both hands at a perfectly flat and clipped tempo. With the band playing four-four, it should drag the whole rhythm, but here it seems to catch the accents perfectly and drive the band, instead of holding it back. Ensemble goes like mad." Art will have his band Pearl Primus, as nearly as I can with him here.

gather, has to be seen to be believed. Dyer-Bennet you already know about from his recent recital at the Statler.

Washington swimming pools will inaugurate their 1944 season with a double-barreled bang! The D. C. Welfare and Recreational Association, in cooperation with the Columbia Light Opera Co., presenting "No, No, Nanette" in Roosevelt Auditorium June 7-10, inclusive, will sponsor a city-wide bathing beauty contest at East Potomac Pool, a week from this morning, June 10. Contestants must be 16 years of age or over, know how to swim and make application in advance to the company's headquarters, 706 Thirteenth st. nw. Winner will receive a war bond, chance to appear in future light opera productions and be honor guest at the final performance of "Nanette." It comes out in this connection that what the Columbia Light Opera Co., really is after is five comely young women to appear in its late summer production. A bathing-beauty contest should attend to the "comely" part of it!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SOME OF THE SMART BOYS inside the Republican Party are quietly urging that their strategy during the coming campaign take the line so powerfully laid down by Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, the other day, when he emphasized various deficiencies in FDR's leadership for permanent peace.

Bridges is one of the Senate Republicans who has a spotless record when it comes to cooperation with the President on the war and on his entire foreign policy. Long before Pearl Harbor, when other Republicans were trying to hamstring the Administration, Bridges was out in front fighting for Roosevelt's main war ideas.

For that reason what he had to say the other day was much more effective. Bridges' main thesis was:

"The American people are not going to rest content with any issue out of this present struggle which results merely in a reshuffled game of balance-of-power politics. We are not going to welcome any new-fangled sort of imperialism—will never acclaim any outcome of this present cataclysm which merely sows the seeds of another and more horribly devastating war."

Weak Point in FDR's Armor

SENATOR BRIDGES then put his finger on what some Republican strategists believe may be the weak point in Roosevelt's war policies, his apparent lack of conviction that this war is not just another war, to be followed by more wars and more power politics.

"Why is it, Mr. President," asked Bridges, "that you no longer talk about a peace that shall endure? Is this why the New York Times of December 18, 1943, quoted you in your press conference as saying:

" 'The Allied conferences were motivated by the general thought that they did not want another war in the lifetime of the present generation.'

"Does this mean," asked Bridges, "that already you have been forced to compromise the ideal of an enduring peace?"

Bridges also quoted the Saturday Evening Post's recent articles by Forrest Davis on the Teheran conference — articles supposed to have been initialed by FDR in advance and which represent the President as believing "that hereafter only countries with an abundance of manpower and resources plus huge industrial plants can engage in the business of war."

Not only GOP strategists, but some of the President's own friends believe this may be a weak point in the President's armor and, even more important, a weak point as far as the Nation is concerned.

From the Republican viewpoint, however, it is only a few men who supported the President before Pearl Harbor, such as Senator Bridges, who can effectively criticize. Most other Republicans can't very well throw stones.

Political Prophet Luce

EVERY YEAR Harvard University awards the Nieman Fellowships to newsmen for outstanding journalism. A dinner is held when the awards are made.

This year's dinner was attended by Harry Luce, publisher of Life, Time and Fortune, and more recently a budding owner of an international airline and of a radio network, and a promoter of embryo Presidents.

After the dinner, Luce and others sat around chatting. Among other things, he declared that an anti-Roosevelt trend was sweeping the entire country. Then, paraphrasing Henry Mencken's wisecrack of 1936, which he will never live down, Luce opined:

"Roosevelt could be licked by a one-eyed Chinaman."

A few days later came the Lister Hill-Claude Pepper victories in Alabama and Florida, the Starnes, Costello and Dies exits from Congress, and the victory of Wayne Morse, a pro-Roosevelt Republican, in Oregon.

Good Neighbors

NELSON ROCKEFELLER, refreshing Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, held a conference of Pan-American development commissions in New York recently, and as part of the entertainment took the Good Neighbors out to his ancestral home on the Hudson near Tarrytown, N. Y.

Most of the Rockefeller family are teetotalers, especially Nelson's father, John D., Jr. Nelson never takes a drink, but he recognizes that there never has been a dry movement in Latin America and that Latins do not understand the absence of alcoholic refreshments.

Perhaps because of this, perhaps because his teetotaler father was absent that day, Nelson was brave enough to break Rockefeller tradition and serve cocktails. They were about the best cocktails that ever passed through the stately stone portals of the Rockefeller estate—and perhaps the only ones.

Nelson himself did not drink them, but his Good Neighbors did, and enjoyed them immensely. In fact, so much so that one Good Neighbor from Mexico insisted on rolling down a hill, hands over his head, to show how easy it was to roll downhill—once you know how. There were no casualties.

Unique Congressman

RARELY DOES a Congressman complain about getting too many Government contracts for his district. But that was exactly what Representative Richard Welch, California Republican, did the other day during a congressional hearing on ship repairs which took place in New York.

"It is pretty hard to understand why men should be transferred from here (New York) to the West Coast to build ships," Welch said. "Now if a New Yorker can build or repair ships on the West Coast, he can do it here . . . I always felt that New York did not get its just proportion of the shipbuilding . . ."

NOTE—Welch is not opposed for reelection this year.

Maybe It Only Seems That Long!

Hollywood, Calif., June 2.—Irene Dunne will have George Brent playing opposite her in "Tomorrow Is Forever." Irene plays the wife of a movie producer. Formerly she had been married to an Army man reported missing. His face was so badly disfigured he didn't have the courage to come back. But after years of plastic surgery he returns, becomes a movie star. In the meantime she's married the producer, but is haunted every time she sees George by the fact that there's something familiar about that man . . . Grad Sears sent following wire to Jack Warner: "The death of Mark Twain was not exaggerated" . . . Jennifer Jones got her credits mixed while doing "A Star Is Born," with Walter Pidgeon. She gave David Selznick credit for "Song of Bernadette." Will this bring on another lawsuit? . . .

GEORGE BRENT

Stranger Than Fiction

At the exact moment Van Johnson was having his leg cut off during a scene in "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," Maj. Ted Lawson, who lost a leg during that raid, walked onto the sound stage. I learned, not from Ted or his wife, that they couldn't find an apartment or a house here. The best they could get is a room in an auto court, and Mrs. Lawson is expecting another baby. If that's the best we can do for our heroes while the war is still on, we're not worth saving, nor are the sacrifices they're making daily worth while . . . A smart guy is Bob O'Donnell, chairman of the Fifth War Loan drive. He's got Texas and Iowa betting against each other on bond sales. Prizes involved are a hog and a steer. Why not same thing from here—Hollywood vs. New York? Exchange a Hollywood ham for a smoked herring from Broadway.

That's Hollywood

A well-known star, about to sign for $65,000 per picture, objected to a clause: "You furnish your own studio telephone and towel service." Seemed such a silly thing, and star wanted it out. Producer was adamant. Star talked it over with his agent, who said, "Let's charge them $250 more per week if we leave it in. They'll cut it out quickly then." Demand was made, but studio signed on the dotted line immediately. Telephone costs $3.50 a month, towel service $4, so now he has a thousand dollars extra per month to laugh about . . . Unless I miss my guess, Esther Fernandez, now doing "Two Years Before the Mast," is going to end up with lots of friends here. That's a nice gal . . . If Hollywood films Peggy Hopkins Joyce's life, I hope it will use Harry Blair's title, "Gentlemen Never Tell" . . . Bill Goodwin named tractor on his ranch "Betty Hutton." It mows everything down!

Broadway Notes and Anecdotes

New York, June 2.—Former Ambassador Tony Biddle tells this story of Rotterman, the Austrian village where he once had a shooting lodge: When the local radio announced the Nazi putsch against the Dolfuss regime, seven of Rotterman's Quislings marched to the city hall, jailed the seven officials there and took over their offices. Two days later came the radio announcement that the putsch had failed. The seven Nazi immediately rushed to their homes, packed supplies for their comfort and went to the jail. There they released the seven imprisoned officials and took their places in jail. The man who had assumed the mayoralty of Rotterman also telephoned his wife. "Don't pay the butcher bills," he advised her, "because tomorrow morning I'm to be hanged."

CHARLES COBURN

Ninety-three of the 94 New York delegates to the Democratic convention are pledged to Roosevelt . . . Secretary Morgenthau is expected to be named head of the new International Monetary Board . . . Ernest T. Weir, the steel man, is pulling for a Dewey-Bricker ticket . . . Dashiell Hammett, author of "The Thin Man," celebrated his fiftieth birthday Tuesday in the Aleutians. Hammett, gassed in the last war, is a corporal now and refuses to be commissioned. He volunteered for overseas duty and had to have all his teeth yanked before he could pass the physical . . . Charles Coburn drew a royal flush at the Hoyle Club Monday, but was so calm that his monocle wasn't budged.

Capt. Don Gentile, who covered the New York night spots last weekend, is a practical young man. He had his pick of the New York notables, but the man he was most anxious to meet was a young flier at La Vie Parisienne, who really had some useful information to impart—useful especially to one who soon will be flying over France again. The flier had been shot down over Havre, fell into friendly hands and was taken to Paris, Spain, Portugal and back to London.

The latest literary bout will involve Philip Wylie's blast in the Saturday Review of Literature against textbook writers. He refers to the textbook publishers as "cap and gown Capones" . . . Morrie Ryskind, the playwright, is in New York to work on the script of Fred Allen's new movie . . . Shirley Temple, who refused $10,000 for a broadcast, will appear on the Army's program, "Visiting Hour," broadcasting from San Francisco. The Army at first invited Shirley to broadcast from Denver, but her mother said it would be impossible because Shirley must remain close to home to catch up on her one weak school subject, botany.

Woody Guthrie is the writer-minstrel-artist who wrote "Bound for Glory," a best-seller of last year. Guthrie, accompanying himself on the banjo, has played at Madison Square Garden and Town Hall, and made recordings for OWI, Victor and the Library of Congress . . . He recently was awarded a Rosenwald Fellowship, which allowed him, for one year, to do whatever he wished to do. Guthrie made his choice. He's working as a cook for the Merchant Marine.

Navy Aides Agree to Operate Brewster Plant Another Week

A War Production Board spokesman said yesterday that the Navy has agreed to continue operations at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp.'s Long Island plant during the coming week while engineers attempt to determine whether the facilities can be used or converted to production of parts for other manufacturers of Corsair fighters.

The Navy has authorized Brewster to continue turning out spare parts for the Corsairs which they have already produced. The Brewster contract was cut 50 per cent by the Navy last week with the provision that in no case should work continue after July 1.

Survey Plant Facilities

Because the Long Island unit makes only parts which are later assembled at the Johnsville, Pa., plant, work was scheduled to come to a halt there this week. A situation which raised considerable opposition from labor because of the approximately 9000 persons employed there.

A group of engineers was sent to the Brewster plant two days ago by WPB Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson to survey facilities. They were instructed to determine whether parts turned out by Brewster were identical with the components made by the two other manufacturers of Navy Corsair fighters, the Goodyear Co. and the Chance Vought Co.

T. P. Wright, director of the Aircraft Resources Board, reported to Wilson by telephone yesterday that he had met with engineers from the three firms involved and estimated it would take a week to complete the study.

Meanwhile, the WPB spokesman said Wilson is "scouring the country" to see if any other items can be manufactured at the Brewster plant if they cannot make parts that will fit planes being made by the two other corporations.

Get Last Pay Checks

New York, June 2 (U.P.).—More than 4500 employes of Brewster Aeronautical plant at Long Island City lined up outside the main gate today to receive their last pay checks and turn in their identification badges.

The United Automobile Workers members, who recently ended their "sitin" demonstration to protest abrupt termination of Navy contracts, stood quietly in a line three blocks long.

Union officials said Brewster agreed to maintain workers' seniority rights for 30 days so that employes can be recalled if new contracts are obtained.

12 Take Spotted Fever Vaccine in Bethesda

Authorities at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Md., yesterday revealed they had vaccinated 12 persons against infection from Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

The vaccine is made available to all physicians in the area. Hospital authorities, however, asked that only rural residents with pets or other animals take advantage of the offer in view of the limited supplies available.

City Building

It is good news that the District Commissioners are supporting the Capper urban development bill which is aimed directly at Washington's slums. We have already expressed our belief that this measure, which has the backing of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is the soundest of the various local housing bills before Congress. And we think it is of the utmost importance to have a comprehensive bill of sound design enacted, not only as a means of accelerating the attack upon our local slums, but also as a pattern of urban development that may be followed on a national scale in the postwar era.

What is involved is nothing less than a new approach to the problems of housing and city building. Until recent years this country had relied almost wholly upon private enterprise to provide its housing, with few restrictions and not much central planning. That method gave us the unspeakable slums of Washington, New York and many other cities. A decade ago the idea of public housing to replace the slums took hold and many creditable projects have been built, too many of them, alas, outside of slum areas. Now it is generally agreed that the rescue of our cities from the blight that is choking them involves much more than the substitution of low-rent housing for slums. The whole problem of rebuilding decaying central areas must be merged with the problem of supplying decent living quarters for slum dwellers.

This undertaking, of course, is beyond the scope of public housing. There has come a general realization, too, that slums will be with us for many decades if we must rely solely upon governmental agencies to finance the redevelopment of slum areas. So a new program has been devised to merge the technique of public housing and private enterprise for rehabilitation of entire urban areas where blight has spread. The powers of eminent domain can be used to bring entire slum neighborhoods into public ownership and then private enterprise can step in, under proper safeguards and a comprehensive city plan, for redevelopment of many reclaimed sections in any way that may be of greatest use to the city.

In our opinion this new approach should not preclude public housing for low-income groups that cannot be decently housed by private enterprise. But it does shift the emphasis to a broader attack upon slum conditions and thus raises the hope of much more rapid progress in improving our housing conditions. We think that this new experiment should be made under the most favorable circumstances. That means, of course, that the best possible bill should be passed. Private builders should be especially interested in having the experiment made with careful planning and every reasonable safeguard against abuse. It is too vital an undertaking to be launched casually or under terms that might bring a progressive and constructive idea into disrepute.

Democratic Leanings

Herbert T. Wechsler, whose nomination as an Assistant Attorney General is now before the Senate Judiciary Committee, appears to be a character no less radical and subversive than the gentlemen who have sponsored him. These include, among other notables, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the senior Senator from New York, the dean of the Columbia University Law School and a former president of the American Bar Association. Chief Justice Stone, for example, described Mr. Wechsler as "earnest, diligent, hard-working and efficient . . . thoroughly well trained in the law . . . a man of exceptional ability and wide legal knowledge . . . of good character, a loyal citizen and well qualified for the position for which he has been nominated."

Against these witnesses, the Judiciary Committee has had to weigh the opinion of John R. Owens of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York, that Mr. Wechsler "might have some Communist leanings," and a somewhat less specific objection lodged by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Union, AFL. The notion that Mr. Wechsler "might have some Communist leanings" seems to have been gleaned from his association, some years ago, with three organizations designated by that redoubtable researcher, Congressman Dies, as "Communist fronts." To be sure, Mr. Wechsler has also been associated with Mr. Justice Stone, whom he served as secretary; with the Columbia University Law School, where he has been a member of the faculty; with the Amen investigation, to which he was attached as a special attorney general of New York State, and with the Supreme Court Advisory Committee on Rules of Criminal Procedure, to which he was appointed by former Chief Justice Hughes. It occurs to us that these associations may very well have given him some leanings toward the institutions, processes and civil rights of American democracy.

Mr. Hull's Torch

This war has not been distinguished for noble words. Most of them, indeed, have been uttered by one man, Mr. Churchill. The Prime Minister rallied the world of free men when it was lying in the valley of the shadow. He and he alone held aloft the torch of freedom. Now comes Mr. Hull, speaking with the same passion, the same authentic ring. The spectacle reminds one of a relay race in ancient Greece. A runner carrying a torch would run with it till he was exhausted. Then another runner would take it from him, and continue the race. Mr. Hull now has the torch, and millions of people everywhere will rejoice at the sight. What he said on Thursday is an earnest that the cause of liberty will be prosecuted till liberty encompasses the earth. This is the only peace politics that amounts to anything.

Secretary Hull spoke with some acerbity in reaffirming the American concern for the spread of liberty. He seemed to imply that his reassurance wasn't needed. If this was his feeling, he was wrong. Millions of people feel that in the last year or so power politics has had more lip service and created more diplomatic activity than peace politics. Mr. Churchill's last speech fortified the feeling. The Prime Minister, who once said that this was a war of causes, declared that there was increasingly less ideology in this war. The Netherlands Foreign Minister, E. N. van Kleffens, expressed the general disquiet. Perhaps, now that Mr. Hull has spoken, the fear will be lessened, and we shall witness a harmonization of power and peace politics. Both of them must run in tandem if fear is to be banished from the hearts of mankind.

It may seem contradictory to link peace and power together. But power is a physical fact like the wind and the rain. And it must be harnessed if power is to promote peace. It was the mistake after the last war to leave power dispersed for the tyrant nations to gather up. Even the French took exception to that dispersion of power. They insisted that the guaranty of their frontiers by the possessors of world power came ahead of the establishment of the League of Nations. But a guaranty was denied in this country. The United States didn't even join the league.

The lesson has now been learned pretty generally, except by unrealistic and Bourbon pacifists. In this war the actual possessors of power have come to an agreement on the maintenance of peace and order when the shooting is over. This should be of prime importance to small nations anxious about their security in a postwar world in the travail of readjustment. It is recognized as such. It was Van Kleffens himself, for example, who, six months ago said that the small nations couldn't accept leadership by the big powers unless the big powers were well armed. He knows that only by the assumption of armed responsibility can the policemen insure world security.

But the exercise of power, to be universally acceptable, must derive from some legal mandate. Otherwise it would degenerate into tyranny. It would likewise degenerate into misunderstandings and worse among the big powers. What makes the small nations uneasy, in other words, is the seeming lack of interest in the development of institutional law by the world policemen. Perhaps some such step is contained in the tentative American ideas for world organization. Certainly the law should be the lord, not power. Only by such means can there be protection of the rights and liberties of all nations. As to the place of the small nations in world administration, there is doubtless a representative assembly in the minds of the world designers. For our part we would like to see interim measures taken which would give a proper place to small nations. Not that we feel that the small nations should sit with the big nations in keeping the peace. That would be as unworkable as it would be to give them a place on the combined chiefs of staff. However, the world bodies that have been and are being formed for specific tasks of consultation or administration should be more representative. For instance, the Advisory Commission for Europe is manned by the big powers, with not one European nation named on it. A seat should be found without delay for a Frenchman.

Steps such as these would quiet the fears of the small nations, and would reinforce the powerful assurance contained in the Secretary of State's statement. That statement couldn't have been better timed. Nor could it have been better couched. When Mr. Hull is moved, as he is on the equality of nations before the law, he can speak with the tongues of the prophets, as President Wilson did.

Army Morale

Morale is a compound. Psychiatrists who have been analyzing its components among American fighting men find—according to a report made at the recent meeting of the American Psychiatric Association—that "the successful soldier is pushed by a complex combination of fear, anxiety and love, but that only love makes him a good soldier." And the love of which the medicos speak is rarely of an abstract character. It is generally centered at first, they say, upon the soldier's country. But it soon focuses upon his outfit, his commanding officer and his friends. The individual, to put the development in the language of the psychiatrists, "transforms a considerable share of his personal self-love to affection and pride in his outfit by the process of identification, and thus is enabled to overcome many obstacles to the performance of his military duties." As a military authority once phrased it, high morale is a conviction on the part of a soldier that he belongs to the finest platoon in the finest company in the finest regiment in the finest army in the world.

But note that the nucleus of this pride and affection is the man's own immediate outfit. This is why the quality of officer personnel in the lower echelons is of paramount importance in the creation of any fighting force. And this is precisely where combat has revealed our own most serious weaknesses. In part, no doubt, this deficiency is due to the fact that our Army, always dwarfed in time of peace, had only a very small number of trained and experienced young officers round whom to build the vast corps necessary for our present huge fighting force. The condition could have been remedied, perhaps, by a more exacting process of selection in our officer candidate schools. Commissions seem to have been handed out rashly and indiscriminately and in too great quantity.

Platoon and company commanders need more than a knowledge of military tactics and physical courage to be effective leaders of men. Leadership is a knack and a talent. To be sure, discipline and training are important, but only in those who possess the fundamental aptitudes for leadership. Men who command troops must first of all command their confidence—evoke in them, this is to say, something more than the respect accorded rank. They must evoke a personal respect, together with those feelings of pride and affection which are the essence of sound morale. They must be able to talk to their men, about the tasks they are called upon to do, about the outfit which for the time being is their world. How many personal talks, we wonder, are given to the tyros about the history and the exploits of their outfits? Any bit of glory out of past and present wars should be treasured and passed on to the enlisted men who are expected to carry on old traditions and establish new ones. In North Africa and Italy, we found that not all our young lieutenants and captains were capable of doing all this—of creating esprit in their men.

These were, perhaps, the exceptions. And with combat experience they are being weeded out and replaced. Perhaps only combat can furnish the final test of the capacity for leadership and complete the process of selection. The record which American fighting men are now writing in Italy and the southwest Pacific is evidence enough that, in the main, their morale is healthy and high indeed. If it stems from pride in their own outfits, that pride has by now had ample justification.

Union Of Intellectuals

Perhaps no one in America is better qualified to speak for intellectuals than Prof. Albert Einstein. In a statement on Sunday to the National Wartime Conference he suggested that they join hands in an organization patterned along the lines adopted by the "working classes." Their comparative lack of organization, he observed, has resulted in their being "less well protected against arbitrariness and exploitation than members of any other calling." Neither the condition noted by the renowned physicist nor his explanation of it seems open to reasonable dispute. The great number of Americans loosely classified as "white-collar employes" have lagged far behind industrial workers in advancing their collective economic interests.

The root of the trouble lies, perhaps, in this very differentiation. Professor Einstein himself appears to have accepted the common classification of "intellectuals" as a species or genus apart from "workers." Yet a considerable proportion of them—teachers, librarians and many employes of Federal, State and local governments—live by wages and, in a very real sense, work to earn them. Awareness of their identification with other workers has come to these "intellectuals" somewhat tardily and reluctantly. In this, if they were more intellectual, they were certainly less intelligent than other workers in promoting their group interests. The world has been content to take them at their own evaluation and to compensate them with kudos instead of cash.

What seems even more serious to Professor Einstein, however, is that, through lack of organization, the influence of intellectuals upon the direction of contemporary life has been dwindling in comparison with that of their less learned fellow workers. The people best educated and best qualified to share in the shaping of our economic and social pathways are not making themselves felt with full effectiveness. They need to join hands in the common interest as well as in their own.

FOR TRAVELERS

Weary traveler, stop and pray
At a shrine along the way;
Dusty, weary road and street,
Endless roads, and broken feet,
Burdened backs and tired hands—
Stranger still the stranger lands.
Though your towns have gone in flames
And your world is stranger names,
Though the road has not an end
There is still a traveler friend.

Weary traveler, fold your hands,
Think of old familiar lands.
Weary traveler, bow the head.
See the Savior's feet are red,
Red with blood, and traveled far
Over ways where travelers are.
Yours are roads that He has worn
Smoothly, still of stone and thorn.
Yours the way that He has passed
Down your roads, but home at last.

Ecuadorian Revolt

ECUADOR'S revolt at present seems to be entirely the result of a struggle for power between two wings of Ecuadorian liberalism. Yet a very lively alert to hemisphere observers was sounded when the Guayaquil junta's proclamation Monday mentioned the Ecuadorian-Peruvian boundary settlement.

Obviously the question of who is to be President of Ecuador and how he gets into office is entirely a domestic matter so long as the peace and safety of the hemisphere is not involved. But if any intention to go back on the Rio agreement were implicit in the movement, then it would automatically become the direct concern of the whole sisterhood of New World republics.

Fortunately, it seems certain that this question will not come up. Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra, whose followers planned and carried out the coup, stated in an interview in Colombia's capital on May 8 that the Rio protocol will be respected. He flatly repudiated all attempts to make it appear that he has ever favored any other course. Thursday he stated that Ecuador will respect international treaties contracted by the preceding government.

Boundary Settlement

The boundary settlement was brought about at Rio through the combined efforts of the United States, Brazil and other Latin-American nations because they saw that this hemisphere had to settle family differences at once in face of grave dangers arising in Europe and Asia. The need for internal peace in the New World is no less urgent as the United Nations poise for the final blow at the Axis. This is why Ibarra's statements have paramount significance.

Ecuador's political situation has been uncertain for a long time and the revolt has not come as a surprise. Many causes have contributed to it. To begin with, Ecuador has for 20 years or more been going through a period of both political and economic ups and downs.

Destruction of their lucrative cacao export trade by the witch-broom disease deepened the world depression's effect on Ecuador. In the late 1930's loss of markets in Germany and the trouble with Peru over the old boundary question added to unrest, economic stress and instability.

Since Pearl Harbor Ecuador has come into a period of unprecedented prosperity through sales of war materials to this country. But with imports extremely short, new income has brought only inflation. The Arroyo del Rio government had to impose certain war controls which have not gone down well with the Ecuadorian people.

But the direct cause of Sunday's revolt seems to be political rather than economic. Arroyo del Rio's government has gone on record for liberal principles. As the election year has rolled around, his party has offered a platform promising increased social advancements for the Ecuadorian people, cooperation with the United States and a vigorous policy of development for Ecuador in the post war. But Arroyo del Rio made the mistake of keeping the candidate of the opposition party in exile. This gave the opposition a strong rallying point and led to the overthrow of his government less than a week before the elections were to be held.

Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra, whose supporters among the younger officers of the army combined with civilians to plan the coup, has offered Ecuador substantially the same platform as the government candidate. His political backing at present comes from a coalition of liberal elements—independent, socialists and labor alike—who have combined in the Democratic Alliance. The deposed government was backed by the Liberal-Radical Party, traditional liberal organization.

Ecuadorian conservatives, numerically a smaller party but of course powerful financially, did not offer a candidate in the election. They apparently do not figure at all in the present coup.

Velasco Ibarra has gone to Quito, taken charge of the government and selected a cabinet. Political amnesty has been announced. Elections will be held to choose a constituent assembly, to meet in early August. This assembly, according to present information, will select Ecuador's next President.

Hemisphere Cooperation

It is to be hoped that Ecuador will get the government it wants and go forward toward political stability. The people of Ecuador deserve all credit and appreciation from us for having done a splendid job of cooperation in hemisphere defense.

They deserve credit for settling the boundary dispute. Equally important, they gave us permission to build and use a base on their strategically located Galapagos Islands. We also have an important base at Salinas, on the Ecuadorian mainland. Their cooperation in getting out strategic supplies—wild rubber, fibers, cinchona, balsa wood, kapok—could not have been better.

Europe Is The Key

By Barnet Nover

The Organization Of Peace

AT HIS PRESS CONFERENCE on Thursday, Secretary Hull again placed himself and the United States on record in favor of a democratic, as against an oligarchic, organization of international life.

"It is," he said, "our disposition and purpose to see that all nations, especially the small nations, are kept in a position of equality with all others and that, in every practicable way, there will be cooperation." And he pointed out that as far back as his address to Congress, following his return from Moscow, he had said:

"The principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a future system of general security will be the foundation stone upon which the future international organization will be constructed."

THIS REASSURANCE to the small nations that their views regarding the organization of peace will not be ignored, their rights protected, is very much in order at this time.

The fact cannot be ignored that very strong suspicions exist that something like an international feudal system is in process of creation, most notably in Europe. Nor are these suspicions entirely unfounded.

During the early years of the war a strong tendency in the direction of regional federation on a democratic basis began to manifest itself.

There was, for instance, the Polish-Czechoslovak Declaration of November 11, 1940, looking toward "a closer political and economic association" of the two nations as "the basis of a new order in central Europe."

There was, earlier, Churchill's epoch-making offer to France to create a joint Anglo-French citizenship. There was the Greek-Yugoslav agreement of January 15, 1942, for the creation of a Balkan customs union.

IT BEGAN to look as if the Europe that would emerge from the war would be a Europe in which the particularist spirit of the past would be supplanted by neighborly cooperation on a far-reaching basis.

That is no longer the case. The federative tendency manifested in Europe earlier in the war has died out. To put it more accurately, it has been killed.

The Polish-Czechoslovak plan of economic federation was killed by veto of the Soviet Union, which is opposed to any kind of a federation of states along its western borders. The Greek-Yugoslav agreement still exists on paper. But it is likely to suffer the same fate as its Polish-Czechoslovak counterpart.

The impression given by recent developments not only in eastern Europe and the Balkans but in the Mediterranean area as well is that Europe is being carved out into spheres of interest dominated by the great powers, or, more precisely, by Russia and Great Britain.

RUSSIA'S alliance with Czechoslovakia and its rumored secret economic clauses, the Russian attitude regarding the future of Poland and its attitude toward Yugoslavia and her conflicting elements are straws in the wind, indications, that all of eastern Europe and much of the Balkans lie within what we may call the Russian sphere.

It is also assumed that in return of British recognition of this sphere Russia is willing to recognize the Mediterranean area as a British sphere.

It is certainly clear that the basic political attitude of the great Allied powers toward such nations as Greece, Italy and Spain has been formulated in London and carried out by the British government with the more or less reluctant consent of Moscow and Washington.

BRITAIN'S quid pro quo for our acceptance of the British line regarding Greece, Italy and Spain has been the acceptance of the Roosevelt line on France.

The British do not like that line, which they regard as extremely short-sighted and dangerous, just as there is no particular enthusiasm in Washington for the British line on Spain, where our desire to put the screws on Franco in the matter of wolfram shipments to Hitler was partially negated by the British unwillingness to press a future satellite too hard.

In the meantime the smaller allies have viewed with growing concern the tendency of the major members of the United Nations coalition to ignore them in the setting up of the postwar organization. For instance, the smaller powers have no voice in the European advisory council.

All things considered, the fears of the small powers regarding their future role in the world have not been unjustified. Mr. Hull did not speak out too soon in assuring them that we do not favor the creation of an international oligarchy. But verbal assurances are not enough.

Brewster Problem

As you point out in your editorial "Striking for Work," war plant workers must realize that sooner or later their jobs will end. For the same reason, State and Federal officials must be aware that plans for orderly and quick conversion are as vital to the Nation's economy and morale as blueprints for winning the war.

The "bull in the china shop" method used by the Navy in terminating its Brewster contracts is particularly open to criticism, I think, because it came almost simultaneously with renewed pleas by Army and Navy chiefs for a selective service labor law to force workers into essential plants or to keep them there. These pleas were coupled with repeated innuendoes about the patriotism and cooperation of American workers.

I know several of the Brewster employes. They gave up friends, homes and community life to endure the hardships of a wartime boomtown. One of them sold his home to make the transfer. They were inspired by representatives of various Government agencies who came to their town with elegant appeals for them to "go all out in the war effort."

Several weeks ago on a Connecticut ave. bus I overheard two women discuss the plight of several relatives who had left Washington for a war plant. Without any explanation, they suddenly found themselves "laid off." Now they were asking advice on steps to be taken to repossess the Washington homes they had leased.

On the one hand, the Navy chiefs plead with Congress to "black-jack" workers to get them into war plants; on the other hand, it treats those who go with such ruthless methods.

Why didn't the Navy tip off the United States Employment Service several weeks in advance about ending the Brewster contracts? Then each employe with his dismissal notice could have received a list of available jobs in essential industry. If the need for workers is so great as these Navy chiefs tell Congress then jobs could have been found for every Brewster worker before they even knew they were to be let out.

I have no criticism of our "fighting Navy" which is doing a job that will fill some of history's most brilliant pages. But a number of "brass hats" on the USS Concrete surely need an overhauling and their mental barnacles scraped.

Fourth-Term Advocates

The New Deal campaign song of 1940. "There's No Other Man," is still being sung by some fourth-term advocates. It seems there are not as many in the chorus as there were four years ago and the tone is slightly muted.

Thus far the campaign has been waged with less oratory and eloquence than in former years, but one gets the feeling that quite as much work has been done, one way or another.

If it is true that our country in 62 years has produced only one man capable of administering the affairs of the Nation and conversant with international problems — then every young American who laid down his life at Pearl Harbor died to no purpose and every boy sacrificed on Bataan was sacrificed in vain.

A country that believes itself reduced in power to one manhead is doomed. The doom is foreshadowed in various ways.

Despite the strangulation methods of the last decade I would say that every State in the Union could at this time present creditable presidential material in the form of a man.

Mr. Churchill And Spain

In ill-informed quarters there is much irresponsible criticism of the British Prime Minister's recent eulogy of the Spanish government. Yet it is possible that history may deliver an even more favorable verdict and say that the nonbelligerence of Spain and Portugal was the decisive factor in the United Nations' victory. For whatever Communists may assert, Spain and Portugal could not have remained neutral except under quasifascist governments.

What are the facts? After the fall of France, Hitler could not overrun the Iberian Peninsula in a couple of weeks. Had he done so, and followed it up with an invasion of North Africa from Spain nothing could have stopped his rapidly conquering the whole of the Dark Continent, including Egypt and the gateways to the Near and Middle East, and ultimately India. A juncture with Japan would have ensued and the Axis would have been master of the world.

Why, instead of doing this, Hitler invaded Russia has to most people remained a mystery — a blunder which some have characterized the greatest in military history. There is a simple explanation: Hitler did not invade Spain, and Portugal because they were under the rule of dictators whom he regarded as his own kith and kin.

Portugal, an ally of Britain since the fourteenth century, joined the Allies a few days after the outbreak of war in 1914. She has been adversely criticized for her attitude in the present war, in particular for not having long ago given the Allies' navies the use of the Azores. But had she done so she would have suffered immediate invasion by the Nazis and the occupation of Spain would have followed.

The neutrality of these nations was, then, of capital importance to the United Nations, who can, indeed, be thankful that Spain and Portugal were under totalitarian and not democratic rule.

Postwar Germany

By Paul Winkler

Reeducating Germany

THERE IS much glib talk these days concerning the reeducation of Germany, which usually seems to be envisaged as a moral reeducation. Apparently the defenders of this theory hope to find some sort of magic funnel through which the idea of "love your neighbor" can be poured into the heads of German children and adults alike.

Whatever value reeducation of this sort might have in itself, it is to be doubted that it would be sufficient alone. It seems to me that the reeducation of the German people should be based primarily on the historical approach. The Germans could easily be taught historical facts which today they either do not know at all or have mislearned through the haze of Prussian interpretation.

It is only necessary to point out to Hanoverians, Wurttembergers, Badenese, Hessians, Saxons, Bavarians, Rhinelanders, etc., that not only is Prussian history not their history, but that often their own ancestors fought the Prussians, and opposed with the greatest violence the political ideas for which they stood.

IN FACT, the only part of Germany which would not be susceptible to historical reeducation of this kind would be East Prussia, which became the cornerstone of the Prussian state after the Teutonic Knights started their march of aggrandizement from there in the thirteenth century. But the solution to be applied to this sole remaining stronghold of Prussianism seems so simple as to be almost automatic: it seems probable that East Prussia will be given to Poland, or partly to Russia and partly to Poland, in which case the German populations which preferred to leave East Prussia would probably be permitted to resettle in Germany, where they would be dispersed, and their collective influence weakened.

Thus the German problem would be cured in a manner analogous to chasing an infection from all outlying parts of the body until it has become localized in a single abscess at the focus of infection—after which the abscess can be cut open, and emptied of its poison.

Whether or not the Allies will come to the conclusion, as Mr. Churchill's speech hinted that they might, that German territory should be split up into its component parts, it seems to be clear that German history should be so split up. The German people must be taught to be proud of that part of their history which is not that of Prussian expansionism, and they must be made to hate the Prussian spirit as we do—not only if they are Bavarians or Saxons, but also if they have been accustomed to think of themselves up to now as Prussians.

Such a reeducation should be much more effective than one conducted on a purely moral basis, or even on a pragmatically moral basis—"be good because it pays."

BUT THERE is no need to wait until the war is won to initiate reeducation along these lines. Indeed, it is possible to maintain that it will be too late to begin at all if we wait for the end of a war whose loss cannot fail to leave its imprint on the German people. They should be prepared today to look upon the defeat, as soon as it comes, as the disastrous gift of Prussianism to themselves. Otherwise, they may be so firmly indoctrinated with the belief that, instead, it represents the hatred of other nations for all Germany that the effect may be to cause them to identify themselves too firmly with the Prussianism to be educated out of it.

Allied propaganda should begin to hammer away on these lines at once. Leaflets and lightweight historical booklets dropped from planes, radio broadcasts organized officially by the Allies or by private groups collaborating with the authorities could be employed. Ideas are weapons, and these ideas would be used to attack the famous Weltanschaung which is based on the view of German history foisted upon the people by Bismarck and Hitler. A scientific historical institute might be founded to supply the basic information, which would do the reverse of what Haushofer's Geopolitics Institute does, by keeping rigorously to the truth.

If the Allies proceeded on this basis the problem of whether or not to split up Germany territorially would become secondary. She would be split up psychologically instead, a result which would be much more effective and much more lasting, since it would get rid of the will for unity on the basis of aggression which, if it persisted, could overcome the restrictive influences of the most rigid political and economic partition.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Wilson's Crucial Mistake

EVER SINCE Mr. Sumner Welles' recent address there has been a growing tendency for men to take sides about the role of the smaller and the larger powers. There is here, of course, a fundamental, probably the fundamental, problem of world organization, and we must seek to clarify and resolve the issues, not to dramatize and sharpen them.

LIPPMANN

Since the United States is one of the great powers, Americans can approach this question most lucidly by defining the commitments which they can and should assume. The commitment upon which the whole problem turns is how far and in what way the United States should pledge itself to use military force in the future. It was on this question that the Wilson settlement broke down, and we cannot afford another failure. But in saying this we must not assume, as Mr. Welles does, that Wilson had the right solution and that we must now put it into effect. There are compelling reasons for thinking that Wilson failed because, with the best of intentions, he came home with the wrong solution.

THE CRUCIAL question at Paris was whether to make a specific treaty of peace with Germany and then to organize a League, or whether to organize the League and charge it with enforcing and administering and revising the treaty with Germany, as well as with the solution of all other international questions. If Wilson had agreed to a specific and separate German treaty first, he would have come back with the definite but limited proposal to have the United States help enforce German disarmament over a fixed period of years. There can be little doubt that this treaty would have been ratified easily: it was precisely what Wilson's leading Republican opponents, who were by no means isolationists or pacifists, were asking when Wilson first went to Paris.

Such a German treaty would have held the victorious Allies together for the specific and intelligible task of making sure that Germany did not rearm and try again. The fact that the United States as well as Great Britain were definitely committed would have transformed the French attitude towards the German Republic. For if the German democrats had seen this specific commitment, they would have dared to suppress more drastically the surviving German militarists; the French, assured of support against a revival of German military power, would have been less fearful of, and therefore less unfriendly to, the weak young German Republic.

BUT PRESIDENT WILSON would not take this line, and instead of a specific commitment to enforce the German treaty, he insisted upon giving the League a general world-wide commitment to guaranty all frontiers, and in the end to enforce all treaties. It was against this general, this vague, and this all-inclusive commitment that the Senate rebelled, and Wilson, who was too ill to reconsider his position, preferred to let the whole settlement fail.

If we are wise, we shall not repeat the Wilsonian mistake. As regards pledges to use force in the future, our best course is to make them definite in object and limited in time by embodying them, not in the charter of the new international organization, but in the treaties by which, for the period of their probation, we settle with Germany in Europe and with Japan in Asia. In the charter of the new league open to all peace-loving states, we need not and should not incorporate any commitment to use military force. We should base the new league not on the principle of enforcing world peace but on the principle of continual consultation.

BY MAKING this clear distinction we shall not only dissipate the one issue which could again divide our people in these matters; we shall also see how to resolve the conflict between the great powers and the smaller ones.

If we invest the League with military power, we have no choice but to make the biggest military powers dominant. Neither the United States, nor Britain, nor the Soviet Union would conceivably consent to let an international assembly of some 50 or 60 nations, or even a council of 7 or 11 nations, decide by majority or any other kind of vote to set their armies in motion. An association, in which all nations are sovereign and equal, cannot wield military power. It can consult and collaborate.

But if we make the commitment to use force a part of a settlement that is divorced from the organization of the League, the roles of both large and small powers will be clear. When we fix our attention on the specific task of enforcing the settlement with our enemies, it is immediately evident that many smaller powers must at once be brought in. To administer and enforce, say for 20 years, a special regime to keep Germany disarmed, it is absolutely essential that the immediate neighbors of Germany should approve and should participate. Britain, Russia, and America cannot and will not for long police Germany all by themselves. Merely to get to and from Germany, they have to pass through France, Belguim, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Denmark, Poland, and Czechoslovakia. It would be absurd to think that Germany can be inspected, supervised, occupied, or otherwise controlled, without the active, wholehearted support of her European neighbors.

IF THIS FACT is recognized, then these countries have to be drawn in immediately, not only for consultation about the German armistice and settlement, but as principals, as signatories of the treaties and agreements and as enforcing powers. When that is done, the issue of the great states versus the small ones will have been resolved. It will be resolved not, as Mr. Welles proposes, by making one or two smaller states "representative" of the others on a council which supposedly controls all the force in the world. In a vital matter, such as its relations with a powerful neighbor like Germany, no state can "represent" another state. Every state directly concerned must participate in its own right. And when we settle with Japan, the states directly concerned, who must participate, will not be identical with those that have to settle with Germany.

BY CONCENTRATING and focusing the commitment to use force upon the specific and limited task of making effective settlements with our enemies, we shall avoid the fundamental difficulties at home and abroad on which the Wilsonian settlement was wrecked.

Hull Consults House Leaders On Postwar Peace Agency Plan

By the Associated Press

Secretary of State Hull yesterday extended to the House his campaign for congressional support of a postwar peace agency, conferring with four Democratic and three Republican leaders on his plans for American participation.

The hour-long meeting at the State Department was the latest in a series of postwar international planning developments which on Thursday, disclosed Hull as apparently determined to reinforce his aims for a security organization with the ideal of liberty "for aspiring peoples everywhere" and equality for all small nations.

The House group was headed by Speaker Rayburn of Texas and included these other Democratic Representatives: Chairman Bloom (N. Y.) of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Majority Leader McCormack (Mass.) and Majority Whip Ramspeck (Ga.). Republicans were Minority Leader Martin (Mass.) and Representatives Eaton (N. J.), and Arends (Ill.).

Asked whether the seven would return for later conferences, Bloom said: "We will if we're asked." The next meeting would be delayed a week or 10 days, at least, for Hull has scheduled a vacation trip to Hershey, Pa.

Rayburn described the session as "a very frank and open conversation."

Martin told reporters Hull "discussed with us his ideas of how to implement the peace, along the same lines he has talked with a bipartisan Senate group."

The conference with the House group follows a series of five meetings between Hull and an eight-man Senate committee. The Senate has responsibility for passing on treaties and the House is not constitutionally charged with power over foreign affairs, although Bloom has proposed action to make treaty ratification subject to a majority vote of each House.

Hull's decision to meet with House as well as Senate members of both parties has been interpreted at the State Department as representing a desire on his part to obtain the widest possible support for his plans.

After the Senate talks Hull invited Britain, Russia and China to send representatives here for exploratory conversations on postwar world organization.

Clear U. S. Statement On De Gaulle Demanded

London, June 2 (AP).—A disclosure that the United States will not take part in the coming conferences between Gen. Charles de Gaulle and the British government brought a demand today from the London Daily Mail that Washington clear up what was called its "ambiguous" attitude toward the French Committee of National Liberation.

"The time has come when we feel entitled to ask for a clear understanding," the Daily Mail said. The newspaper added that British refusal to recognize the committee was in deference to United States wishes.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Churchill As Peacemaker

WINSTON CHURCHILL must be considerably surprised by the dustorm kicked up around the world by his speech on foreign policy and his vision of the world today and tomorrow.

CHILDS

Partly, of course, it's political dust. Partly it's being deliberately thrown into the fierce winds that beat upon this battered old planet.

But partly, too, it comes out of a misunderstanding of Churchill himself. And that is too bad. It means a lot of unnecessary confusion and uncertainty.

Americans who were disturbed by the lengthy Churchill speech tend to say: "Can this be the man who spoke out only four years ago with such eloquent courage, who fired the world with new hope in the struggle against tyranny?

The answer is yes. Same man, same mind, same heart.

What he did in 1940 no other man could have done. In the controversy that has now begun it is important to remember that he saved our world because of what he is.

STANDING ALONE, he spoke like another Shakespeare of the eternal truths for which men will fight and die. He sheared through all the doubts and fears of the twentieth century, addressing himself not to a class or a group or a region, but to men and women everywhere.

Churchill could speak that way not because he had resolved in his own mind the doubts and fears of our time, but because he's never allowed himself to be troubled by them. He goes back to the heroic days of Queen Elizabeth when the Anglo-Saxon peoples were moving to conquest all over the globe.

His is a simple world; a world in which values have not been blurred and distorted. They remain for him as clear and simple as, let's say, the values of right and wrong in the play, "Macbeth." So when he looks to the future, it is to an organization that has familiar outlines. It is why he could say toward the end of his address to Parliament:

"We are bound by our 20 years' treaty with Russia, and beside this—for my part, I hope to have deserved to be called a good European—we should try to raise the glorious continent of Europe, parent of so many powerful states, from its present miserable condition as a kind of volcano of strife and turmoil, to its old glory as the family of nations and as the vital expression of Christendom."

That's not merely rhetoric. ". . . A good European . . ." ". . . . It's old glory as the family of nations and as the vital expression of Christendom." Those phrases express Churchill's profound convictions. Perhaps his concept would go as far as a United States of Europe.

The danger in the limitations of the Churchill view, it seems to me, is not for the immediate future. Perhaps the old familiar pattern can be re-created around a three-power alliance—the USA, Britain, Russia. Such an alliance may even be a necessary first step toward something more inclusive.

BUT I'M AFRAID the tendency would be to stop there—with a good, old-fashioned, working alliance to maintain the peace by force. The tendency would be to keep patching and tinkering, using string and glue, to make the old skeleton dance again.

The tendency would be to ignore or even to try to repress the larger forces inevitably growing and pushing up beneath the bright, smooth surface of Winston Churchill's world. I mean especially the yeasty upward climbing force of peoples still untouched by the revolution of the machine—in India, in Latin America, in the Middle East.

What, then, of Churchill as a peacemaker? Leadership must come from another source. Churchill's view will have to a considerable section of the American people too much the look of the old game of power politics.

I don't think that we Americans are naively idealistic today. I don't think we want to superimpose any ready-made, patented league. At the same time, however, the makers of the peace must recognize the strain of idealism that is in us.

Both from the practical and the idealistic point of view, we want to move with the forces of the future and not against them. The past as re-created by Prime Minister Churchill is magnificent, but it is the past.

Bill Provides For U. S. Licensing Of Radio Newsmen

Radio news commentators with commercial sponsors would have to get Federal licenses under legislation being drawn up by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.). They also would have to obey a "code of ethics" laid down by Congress.

Johnson, a member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, advanced this plan to take the place of a now-sidetracked proposal by Chairman Wheeler (D., Mont.) to prohibit news broadcasts sponsored by advertisers.

Calling a flat prohibition too drastic, Johnson told a reporter he thought Wheeler's aim of preventing what he called the "smearing" of people in official life or public prominence could be accomplished through a revocable license system.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 2.—Chicago, like every other section of the country where there are race tracks, is registering a tremendous boom in betting at considerable profit to the track operators. The million-dollar betting day, once a topic for only the rank visionaries, is getting commonplace.

POVICH

Belmont saw the fantastic sum of more than three million dollars poured into the mutuel windows one day this week. The only reason the total didn't hit four million dollars was because there wasn't time for everybody to bet all he wanted in the half-hour between races. The lines at the sellers' windows were so long when the bell sounded the end of each race's betting, hundreds of thousands of dollars went unplayed.

Just to give you an idea of how much profit the race track operators can take down from two good days, the final Saturday at Jamaica and Memorial Day at Belmont netted the Red Cross and the National War Fund $252,665. That represents the profits of only two days of racing, mind you.

The reason for the betting boom is, of course, that money was never more free. Wartime inflation has swollen the pocketbooks of the track customers and the $2 bettor of peacetime is in the $10 line, with the $10 bettors jamming the $50 and $100 windows. Ever since the parimutuel machines were introduced by the tracks, the bulk of the play until the last couple of years, was at the $2 windows. Last year, the report of the New York Racing Commission reveals, more money passed through the $10 ticket sellers than any others.

The Detroit track always used to be regarded as a bush track, where, if the betting reached $200,000 in an afternoon, it was a whopping day. Not now. Detroit has been having its million-dollar days as well as Belmont, Jamaica, Pimlico, Suffolk, Washington Park and Hawthorne.

Detroit's Fair Grounds track was built to seat only 7000 persons. Yet on Decoration Day, the actual count was 25,630 persons inside the grounds. The little Fairmont track in St. Louis, which used to play to 2000 on a normal weekday afternoon in peacetime, drew 17,000 horse bettors for its Decoration Day program that featured only the cheapest horses.

If New York could turn over $252,000 to a charity as the profits of only two days of racing, albeit big ones, then consider how much money was bet into the machines. That $252,000 represents only the profits of about 15 per cent, mind you. More than five million dollars was bet into the machines of those days, and the tracks picked up $50,000 in odd pennies that the bettors didn't collect on their winning bets. That was the old "breakage" caused by the tracks' rule of paying off to the nickel instead of the penny.

The fact that three million dollars is bet in a single day doesn't mean, of course, that much money was ever at the track on that day. The total was amassed by the eight race turn-over, and George Krehbiel, of the Detroit News, estimates that only about $600,000 in cash is required to finance a three million dollar betting day at the tracks.

Actually, there is a nine-race turnover, if you count the daily double betting, which represents an extra pot for the track. The daily double is a completely separate betting operation into which the track dips its hand for the conventional 10 per cent take.

The most interesting treat on the subject of the betting turn-over that we have happened upon lately was done by Ed Wray, of the St. Louis Post Dispatch. He shows, very cleverly, what happens to the money the fans take to the track on a given day.

He takes the starting capital of the track crowd at $600,000 and shows how that money dwindles from the process of being bet and rebet. With the track taking 10 per cent of each betting operation, plus the "breakage" Wray illustrates with a percentage table how the $600,000 the fans take to the track shrinks at the end of eight races to a mere $250,000. Somewhere during the day's operations, the track and the State have belted the bettors for more than 50 per cent of the money they brought with them.

4-Run Blast In Second Settles Issue

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, June 2.—Dutch Leonard, acting very unlike Dutch Leonard, pitched six-hit ball in the second inning tonight and the Nats took a 5-2 licking from the White Sox before 13,286 highly pleased Chicago fans.

That one rough inning for Leonard cost the Nats the ball game, with the White Sox scoring four runs during the session. They packed six of their 11 hits of the night into that assault on Leonard's knuckler.

Until tonight, Thornton Lee had not won a game this season for the White Sox but the Nats put a stop to that. They made nine hits off Lee but they could stir up only two runs, and went scoreless except in the sixth inning.

Spence Continues Spree

The Nats weren't scoring at all when Stan Spence wasn't hitting two-baggers to left field. He hit only one of those, but the blow, one of his three hits of the night, drove in Case and Myatt, both of whom had reached base by beating out bunts.

Two hits in the first inning netted the Nats nothing, because Roberto Ortiz obliged the Sox by hitting into a double play. One of the hits was Stan Spence's single, which was his seventh straight blow following his six consecutive hits at St. Louis yesterday.

The White Sox poured it on Dutch Leonard in that second inning when they took a 4-0 lead. Leonard's knuckle ball was ineffective and he was forced to face nine men during the inning. Six of them hit safely. Carnett and Clarke commenced the onslaught with singles and after Tresh fanned, Webb doubled to the wall in left. Then Lee singled to right and Moses singled to center. Schalk flied out and Tucker drove in the fourth run with a single to center.

Ortiz Doubles In Fourth

Leonard settled down after that but Lee reeled off five scoreless innings and took his 4-0 lead into the sixth. In the third Sullivan led off with a single but the Nats couldn't move him off first. In the fourth, Ortiz doubled to right with one out but Wally Moses turned the Nats back scoreless with a fancy grab of Powell's long drive.

In the sixth, though, the Nats tried a new tack—bunting—and got two runs. George Case led off by pushing a bunt past Lee for a single and taking second on Schalk's wild throw. Then Myatt laid one down the third base line and beat it out. Then Stan Spence doubled down the line in left to score them both.

But the Nats got nothing more out of the inning. Ortiz took a third strike and Torres grounded out. Powell drew a walk but the Nats were retired ingloriously when Spence was out at the plate by a dozen feet on an attempted double steal with Powell.

They got nothing in the seventh, either, despite the fact Ferrell led off with a single. Sullivan took a third strike and Leftfielder Hodgin eased the pressure for Lee by a one-hand catch of Pinch-hitter Early Wynn's long drive to the left field wall.

Nats Stymied in Seventh

Milo Candini got the Washington pitching job in the seventh and disposed of the Sox one-two-three, but the Nats could do nothing about their 4-2 deficit in the eighth despite Stan Spence's continued hitting spree. He singled to center with one out and languished on first while Ortiz and Torres flied to Moses.

Candini gave up the Sox's fifth run in the eighth on two hits. Hodgin beat out an infield single, and moved to third on Clarke's single to right. He scored while Sullivan was throwing out Clarke on a force play.

In the ninth, the Nats couldn't get to first base against Lee which is no way to wipe out a three-run deficit.

Stan Spence's hitting spree has reached the sensational stage with nine safe blows in his last ten times at bat . . . Tonight in four trips he collected two singles and a two-bagger . . . The Nats were squawking all night at the decisions of Umpire Hal Weafer behind the plate . . . Both Ortiz and Sullivan were called out on suspicious-looking pitches . . . The wind was at Leonard's back during the early innings, possibly accounting for the ineffectiveness of his knuckler, which doesn't do its tricks in a tail wind . . . Johnny Niggeling, with a week's rest, will try to win one for the Nats tomorrow afternoon against Bill Dietrich, who has a record of five wins and four losses.

Four Noses on the Wire in Sensational Finish

Charles Town fans saw one of the tightest finishes in the history of the track yesterday in the third race. The camera had to be called upon to separate four of the six horses in the field. They came into the wire: first—J. E. Crider's Worries (second from rail); second—O. T. Brice's Star Governor (outside); third—H. R. Dulaney's Stellita (on rail); fourth—Tranquility Farm's Freelands Own (second from outside). Worries paid $15.60

Armstrong Is Beaten By Joyce

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, June 2 (AP). — Willie Joyce, Gary (Ind.) Negro, checked the comeback winning streak of Hammerin' Henry Armstrong in a blistering 10-round battle fought in stifling heat in the Chicago Stadium tonight. Armstrong was seeking his eleventh straight victory, but the decision went to Joyce.

The decision of the two judges and Referee Norman Garrity was unanimous, but the balloting was close. The verdict was mingled with boos and cheers.

Previously Joyce and Armstrong had met twice, with each chalking up a decision.

The terrific heat kept the attendance down to 10,387 sweltering, shirt-sleeved spectators, who paid $35,552 to witness Armstrong's setback.

Armstrong forced the battle from the start, firing punches from all angles, but the Gary lightweight kept peppering him with snaky left jabs to the face while in retreat. Armstrong, fighting head to head, forced Joyce backward to escape from his jolting blows delivered at close range.

Joyce won the first two rounds decisively by skillful jabbing and with Armstrong's blows falling short or wild.

Armstrong, however, came back with the start of the third and won the next four rounds with the exception of the fifth, which he lost by throwing punches into foul territory.

Armstrong fought a relentless, tireless battle, chasing Joyce all the way. His punches, however, often fell short or were wild, but he never gave up forcing the issue.

Browns Beat Athletics, 3-0, On Early Error

St. Louis, June 2 (AP).—Backed by the five-hit pitching of Bob Muncrief and taking advantage of George Kell's error in the second, the St. Louis Browns defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 3-1, tonight.

Vernon Stephens opened the Browns' second inning when he was safe on Kell's error. Gene Moore and Milt Byrnes beat out infield hits to load the bases. Mark Christman singled, scoring Stephens and Moore. Don Gutteridge sent in the third run of the game when his single, the last Brown hit, scored Byrnes.

Jockey Root Rides Three More Winners

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 2.—Jockey Buddy Root added three winners to his long list of saddle successes here today. One of his winners was aboard Herman Brown's Market Place in the featured Tyler Purse.

The 5-year-old scored the easiest kind of a win in the test of about 7 furlongs. Market Place, under a grip, coasted into the wire lengths ahead of the closest opposition which was G. W. Tanneyhill's Ler-Lin. John E. Hughes' Freeborn was third. Only two others competed.

Market Place was bet and rebet by the estimated crowd of 2500 and paid a mere $3.20 mutual. The son of Mayne and Going Home was clocked in 1:27 4-5 for the route over a track labeled "good," having been watered down last night by a storm.

Bell Some raced with Market Place early, but Root soon had the gelding in front. He saved ground with Market Place and the combination gave its backers no anxious moments. Ler-Lin, a trailer early, came with a rush in the closing stages to take the place money from Freeborn.

The daily double paid a healthy $178.80 mutuel. The Palmetto Stable's Carolina Bell, paying $57.80, won the first race and E. C. Allnut's Gay Boo, a $3.80 shot ridden by Root, accounted for the second. Root also triumphed with Mrs. W. S. McCabe's Shailleen in the seventh, the 7-year-old mare paying $11.80.

BETWEEN RACES . . . Talk about tight finishes, the end of the third race today was a sizzler with four of the six horses finishing near a dead heat. It was so close that some fans, at an angle, thought Freeland's Own, the fourth horse, had won. Bobby Edens, the ace apprentice, was the hero aboard Worries. By the way, W. G. Walker, who used to handle mounts for Stanley Austin, now in the Army, is doing a nice job as jockey agent for Edens. H. C. (Pete) Allnut, now in the Navy, was up to see his father's Gay Boo win the second race in the well-known Rockville colors.

Yankees Rout Indians, 5-1; Borowy Wins

Cleveland, June 2 (AP).—Ten hits, including two doubles and a triple, gave the New York Yankees a 5 to 1 triumph over the Cleveland Indians at Municipal Stadium before 12,581 tonight.

Paul Calvert struck out six Yankees in six innings, but a wild pitch and two New York singles for three runs in the seventh frame batted him out of the box. Hank Borowy went all the way for the victors. The Indians collected eight hits, but failed to combine them for more than one tally.

20,339 Watch Cards Defeat Phillies, 9 to 3

Philadelphia, June 2 (AP). — The St. Louis Cardinals, making their season's debut here before 20,339 fans tonight, shoved five runs across in the eighth inning, after pounding Ken Raffensberger out of the box, for a 9 to 3 victory.

Morton Cooper, going all the way for the Cards, allowed eight hits, including Buster Adams' sixth home run of the year in the seventh inning.

The Cards scored twice in the first inning on singles by Pepper Martin, Stan Musial and Walker Cooper, interspersed with an error.

Musial's triple and singles by Walker Cooper and Emil Verban, along with another error, accounted for two more Red Bird tallies in the sixth, after the Phillies had scored once in the fifth on Ron Northey's double and Glen Stewart's single.

Then came the eighth, and singles by Danny Litwhiler, George Fallon, Verban, Morton Cooper and Johnny Hopp, which with an error and an outfield fly, accounted for the five runs.

In the ninth, the Phillies made a feeble attempt to come back, scoring a run on Adams' single and Northey's triple.

Tippy Larkin Stops Freddie Archer in Eighth Before 7924

New York, N. Y., June 2 (AP).—Tippy Larkin of Garfield, N. J., scored a technical knockout in one minute and 24 seconds of the eighth round over Freddie Archer of Newark, N. J., tonight before a sparse crowd in Madison Square Garden. Archer weighed 146½, Larkin 141¼.

The fight, one of the most sensational of the season, was witnessed by only 7924 who contributed to a gross gate of $19,834.

The finish to Larkin's third straight win was a dramatic one. They had been milling along on almost even terms for seven rounds, when early in the eighth Larkin crossed a right to Archer's jaw.

The former Seabee weaved, but refused to go down. Ten times in a row Larkin landed his right on Archer's unprotected jaw as the youngster staggered around the ring, but he stayed up. As he finally was battered through the ropes by a flurry of rights and lefts, Referee Billy Cavanaugh stepped in and stopped it.

Archer was unconscious in his corner for about five minutes after the bout, and finally was half-carried to his dressing room.

Braves Blank Reds, 4-0, on Tobin's 3-Hitter

Boston, June 2 (AP).—In addition to limiting the Cincinnati Reds to three hits, Jim Tobin, the Boston Braves' ace righthander, knocked in two runs today while gaining his third shutout of the season by a 4-0 margin.

"Tobe" singled to left with runners on third and second in the second inning. Phil Masi homered over the left field wall in the fourth and a double by Elmer Nieman and Masi gave the Tribesmen their fourth counter in the sixth.

Nova Scores Over Scott

Oklahoma City, June 2 (AP).—Lou Nova, California heavyweight, punched out the twelfth straight victory of his comeback tour tonight, decisioning Buddy Scott of Tampa, Fla., in a 10-round bout in which Nova held the advantage throughout.

Nova, who weighed in at 204, opened an old cut over Scott's left eye in the fourth round and continued to pummel the Florida fighter with short left jabs to the head until Scott's eye was closed in the final round.

Scott weighed 180. He put up a good showing, taking Nova's blows and returning most, but it was obvious from the beginning he was no match for Nova.

Louis-Conn Bout Talk Is Resumed

Pittsburgh, June 2 (AP).—A strictly G. I. bout between Sergt. Joe Louis and Corpl. Billy Conn may be in the making, Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, said here today.

Ray said that the former lightheavyweight champion has been "talking with military authorities" concerning the possibility of arranging a 15-round bout—with no purse—either overseas or in the United States, adding that soldiers all over the world would be "interested" in such a venture.

Conn doesn't want to put the heavyweight champ "on the spot," Ray said, but thought that Louis, too, would welcome the chance to entertain the servicemen.

Chicubs Edge Dodgers, 2-1, Amid a Riot

Brooklyn, June 2 (AP).—Manager Leo Durocher was ejected from the field and a shower of empty bottles rained down about Umpire Jock Conlan tonight as Claude Passeau pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 2-1 edge over Brooklyn, snapping a six-game losing streak.

The near riot came in the seventh when Frenchy Bordagaray rapped a single on which Bobby Bragan romped home from second but Goodie Rosen was thrown out trying to go from first to third on the hit. The umpire ruled that Rosen was retired for the third out before Bragan crossed the plate and disallowed the run.

Chicago's winning spurt came in the same seventh when on a combination of Roy Hughes' double and Phil Cavaretta's single.

Buckeye Hurler Pitchse No-Hitter

Columbus, Ohio, June 2 (AP).—Don Grate, Ohio State University basketball and baseball star, pitched the Bucks to a no-hit 6 to 1 victory over Indiana University today. A walk, a two-base error and a fielder's choice accounted for Indiana's run in the first

Western, Eastern Gain Interhigh Playoff

Colts Bow, 4-3; Riders Beaten, 9-5

By Newton Bowers

Western will meet Eastern for the 1944 Interhigh baseball championship Tuesday afternoon.

The Red Raiders defeated Coolidge, 4-3, in a thriller at Anacostia and the Ramblers thumped Roosevelt, 9-5, at Eastern in the first round of the Interhigh baseball series yesterday to gain the championship round. The title game site has not been selected.

Big Bobo Henry started on the hill for the Colts and was relieved by Fred Basinger in the fourth after having walked five men in succession.

Gould Allows 5 Hits

Gene Gould went the route for the Raiders, hurling a five-hitter, fanning 11 and winning his sixth interhigh game of the season against two defeats. Gould's curves and change of pace baffled the Coolidge batters throughout.

The Colts scored first in the second inning when Paul Sickle was safe on a fielder's choice, stole second and came home on Ray Harrison's single.

Western tied the score in the third when Jack Castro was walked, stole second and was batted to third. Pitcher Henry then threw a wild pitch and Castro scored.

The Raiders forged ahead, 3-1, in the fourth inning on five passes and a wild heave. With the bases loaded, Henry again threw wild and Center Fielder Leonard Reed scored. Henry walked two more Raiders, walking in a run. At this point, Fred Basinger entered the game and retired the side pronto with a quick double play and a strikeout.

The Colts scored their final counter in the sixth when Bill Shaw singled and Charley Kiesgen hit a triple deep into center field after two were out.

Conway Hits Homer

Third Baseman George Conway, who injured his ankle in the last Rider contest, furnished Western with its climax run when he hit a home run to the left field stands in the eighth inning.

Pitcher Gene Collins and Phil Cocimano did the damage for the Eastern team, allowing eight well scattered hits between them. The victory went to Collins who pitched shutout ball for seven innings before he was touched for three runs.

Eastern scored five runs in the third, two in the fourth and one each in the fifth and eighth. First Baseman Al Allen and Shortstop Bill Kirk provided the chief artillery in the Ramblers' attack.

Catcher Nick Argyropoulos and Pitcher Reed Maier shared the leading role for Roosevelt. The Riders scored three runs in the seventh and concluded with two in the ninth.

Mrs. H. B. Willey Takes Hopkins Cup Golf Tournament

Mrs. H. B. Willey fired a 100—20—80 over the Washington Golf and Country Club links yesterday to win the Hopkins Cup from a field of 26 Class B handicap golfers.

Although her card stood up as the day's low gross, Mrs. Willey elected to accept the trophy and the low gross award went to Mrs. Hale Dineen who posted 103.

The second low net prize was won by Mrs. W. E. McDonald, who carded 115—33—82, while third net honors were garnered by Mrs. M. M. Alexander with a score of 113—28—85.

Others to finish in the money were Mrs. E. J. Fay, 108—22—86, and Mrs. R. L. Hutchison, 106—19—87.

Wilson Golfers Defeat Roosevelt For Interhigh Title

Woodrow Wilson linksmen carried off the trophy emblematic of the interhigh golf championship by defeating the Roosevelt High squad, 7 to 2, over the Indian Spring course yesterday. This marked the ninth triumph of the season for the Green Tigers out of 11 starts.

Harry Gustin, Wilson veteran, playing his final schoolboy match before entering the service, bowed out victoriously by defeating the Riders' Papiere, 6 to 5. This gave Gustin a grand slam for the season as he won all of the 11 matches he played for Wilson.

Manders (W) defeated Abrams (R), 4 and 2.
Gustin (W) defeated Papiere (R), 6 and 5.

Armstrong Beats Douglas Nine, 11-6

Overcoming a five-run deficit in the opening frame, Armstrong High yesterday defeated Douglas of Baltimore, 11 to 6, at Brooks Stadium in the opening game of the three-game series for the baseball championship of the South Atlantic Colored Athletic League.

Featured for the winners was the hurling of Elmer Nichols, who took over in the first from Ray Reeder to work the remainder of the route, giving up only 2 hits and 1 run. Also instrumental in Armstrong's win was the slugging of center fielder Bill Mayo, who rapped out a single, a double and homer to score a man in each instance.

Pensive Goes After Triple Crown Today

By Orlo Robertson

New York, June 2 (AP).—Pensive gets his chance tomorrow to join that select group of six horses who have won the American turf's triple crown of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

With victories in the Derby and Preakness already safely tucked away, the stretch-running chestnut from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm is the favorite to whip seven other 3-year-olds in the seventy-sixth Belmont Stakes—mile and one-half counterpart of the English Derby which is expected to draw more than 40,000 fans to the Long Island racing plant for another $3,500,000 betting day.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Postwar 40-Hour Week Seen for U. S. Employes

New York, N. Y., June 2.—The Federal employe will be placed on a five-day, 40-hour week, his salary will be cut but it won't be necessary for him to buy war bonds, a health and safety program will be instituted and working conditions generally will be improved. This is the outlook for the postwar Federal employe as foreseen by Edgar Young of the Budget Bureau, in a speech yesterday before the Civil Service Assembly that concluded its two-day session in the Hotel New Yorker here. Young said there was no assurance whatever that overtime pay would be continued by Congress after the war. In fact, he implied that hte present Administration would oppose its continuance. He did say, however, that he believed Congress would extend the Overtime Act beyond June 30, 1945, if the war is still going on.

OTHER SPEAKERS, representing State and local governments, foresaw increased salaries for public employes in the postwar period compared to former prewar days. It was generally felt that the salary scales in private industry would not drop to former prewar levels and that all forms of government will be compelled to raise salaries. Young, however, said no one he knew in the Federal Government had plans to raise base salaries, but he conceded that Congress may eventually order a 10 per cent cut in income—base salary and overtime—for Federal workers when the length of the work week is reduced. The Overtime Act adds 21 per cent to the salaries of employes who earn up to $2900. Young doesn't believe overtime will be abandoned until the pressure is taken off the sale of war bonds. In that event the take-home of the Federal employe would be only somewhat less.

IT WAS OBVIOUS to the most casual observer that the administration of veterans' preference is worrying personnel people. The fear was expressed repeatedly that many career civil service people would be forced out of their jobs unless some clear and uniform policy is adopted by city, State and Federal Government. Almost no hope was held out for postwar jobs for war service appointees unless they land on top in competition with veterans. Others foresaw an intense struggle for jobs between the veterans themselves.

What types of veterans should be given preference also came in for discussion. Some of the people here felt strongly that a desk soldier shouldn't be given the same preference as the soldier who is fighting on the Anzio beachhead, and preference for the sons and daughters of those who die on the battle fronts was advocated in some quarters. Legislation is now being considered in New York State that would give veterans preference for promotions after they are in the State service. Eliot Kaplan of the Civil Service Reform League opposed this provision for any Government on the ground that no double standard should be set up between veterans and non-veterans.

KAPLAN WOULD give preference only in entrance examinations which would help the veterans get jobs. He said that veterans who claimed disability should be certified by the Veterans Administration that they had a disability rating of at least 20 per cent before they could get additional preference.

The right of the public employe to strike also brought about considerable discussion. Mayor LaGuardia started it off by telling the assembly that at no time and at no place should the public servant be permitted to strike. However, Col. A. E. Garey of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, and V. C. Phelan, president of the Civil Service Federation of Canada, both said they believed public employes should have the right to strike, although they emphasized they weren't advocating strikes. Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, agreed with LaGuardia, and he added that employe unions should discipline its members who do strike.

300 District Scouts 'Dig In' For Three Days of Camping

About 300 Boy Scouts and their leaders from the Northern Washington Council assembled in the wooded recesses of the vicinity of 18th and Colorado rd. nw, yesterday evening and pitched camp for a three-day session with nature.

Forty-eight separate camp sites were designated, and the boys dug in, literally. Trenches were dug around each tent as it was set up, because if the rain the weatherman predicted arrives, the boys are expected to stick it out with dry bedding.

Carrying packs of bedding and food on their backs and on handmade go-carts, the boys first checked in for inspection yesterday. They were shown a tick in a bottle, and poison ivy growing near headquarters, assigned a camp site, told where sick bay and the water supply were located, and then put on their own to set up camp and cook supper. A campfire program was held before Taps last night.

Each boy will be graded on his ability to set up camp, cook his own meals, cleanliness, etc., and outstanding campers will be chosen by two service officers, Lieut. Audley B. Leaman of the Army Air Force and Lieut. Harry Darr of the Naval Research Laboratory.

Today the boys will hold court of honor to present awards during an evening campfire program, the first time the northern district has ever had an outdoor court of honor. Maj. Paul Siple, eagle scout who accompanied Admiral Richard E. Byrd on the North Pole expedition, will make awards to eagle scouts. Two signal officers from the Army will demonstrate signals and an Indian from the Indian office will tell about Indian camp methods.

Earlier in the day an obstacle race will be held, and a first aid unit of Arlington scouts will present a demonstration.

Tomorrow, special devotional programs will be held, and a final presentation of awards for outstanding camping will be made.

Two More Sentences Given Burton on Lesser Offenses

George K. Burton, 26, former hospital orderly sentenced this week to serve 7 to 21 years on a second-degree murder charge, yesterday received two more sentences for lesser offenses, one of which is to run concurrently with the murder sentence.

Burton was indicted with Stanford Carrier for the murder of Paul Higgins, whose body was found in an alley, crushed by the wheels of an automobile. Carrier still faces trial on the charge.

Burton was given 6 to 18 months yesterday on each of five charges of passing fraudulent checks, to which he pleaded guilty. He received a sentence of four months to a year and a day for attempting jail-break last June while he was awaiting trial. This sentence is not concurrent but will be served after the completion of the original sentence.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court also passed judgment on Irving Bienenstock, Brooklyn, N. Y., who pleaded guilty to three counts of illegal liquor dealings. Bienenstock was given a two to six months suspended sentence on each count and a fine of $200. He was charged with illegally transporting 39 bottles of whiskey and cognac into the District on two different occasions and also charged with possessing 24 bottles of spirits that had counterfeit Government tax stamps attached to them.

His lawyer, M. J. Sawyer, pleaded for leniency, stating that his client came from a family of fine background and that Bienenstock had "gone through such remorse he would never be in court again."

Justice McGuire warned that if the defendant ever came into court again on similar charges, he would get a much more severe sentence.

Donnelly Named D. C. Corporation Counsel Assistant

John J. Donnelly, jr., 25, of 4012 19th pl. ne., has been appointed an assistant corporation counsel at Municipal Court, it was announced yesterday.

Donnelly studied at George Washington University and received his law degree from Columbus University in 1941. He formerly was in the law office of William E. Leahy, District Selective Service director, and served as secretary for the late Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, from 1936 to 1940.

A resident of Washington for 15 years, Donnelly is married and has a year-old son.

Lester Gets 4 Months to Year In False Pretense, Check Case

Arnold Lester, 43, the "Foster Smith" who posed as a movie talent scout and charmed Washington chorus girls, was sentenced yesterday to serve from four moths to one year in prison on 11 charges of false pretense and bad-check passing.

Lester was brought before Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court in a wheel chair and was unable to stand when the sentence was pronounced. He has been suffering from a bone infection for several months.

The court took into consideration the fact that Lester had already served seven months in jail while awaiting trial. He is wanted in several other court jurisdictions on similar charges, according to Assistant United States Attorney George B. McNeil.

The man of a dozen aliases, Lester swept into town a year ago with promises of movie contracts and plans for a Hollywood production to be entitled "Capital Capers," which would be premiered here with a galaxy of top stars in attendance.

He reserved rooms for the stars, it was charged, and offered many of the chorus girls in the stage attraction, "Sons of Fun," various movie contracts. His operations were based at the Statler Hotel, and he passed bad checks totaling $735 at the hotel and local department stores, spending the money for lavish entertainment, hotel suite rent, expensive foods and liquids with which to impress local film representatives, according to the indictment.

When the checks began to bounce, he hurriedly left town but was arrested in Chicago and returned here to face charges.

Miller Resumes Law Practice, Wins Larceny Case for Client

Robert I. Miller, acquitted of murder two days ago, was back in court yesterday and won freedom for a woman client accused of theft. She was the first client since February 21, when Miller's legal practice was temporarily interrupted by his arrest for the love-triangle slaying of Dr. John E. Lind.

The 67-year-old criminal lawyer had changed from the somber blue suit he wore throughout the District Court murder trial to a light tan summer suit, sport shoes, and multicolored flowered cravat. He appeared in Municipal Court to represent Matilda Quirey, 42, 610 East Capitol st.

She was charged with the larceny of $12 from Edna Jones of the same address. The Government agreed to dismiss the case on grounds of insufficiet evidence.

"I've gotten a flood of mail from all over the country congratulating me," the white-haired lawyer said, referring to the verdict returned for him by the jury last Wednesday. He explained he had received at least two bags of mail, but asked reporters to "forget the affair."

"It's all over now," Miller said, fingering the lining of his tie in the same manner that he did throughout the two and a half weeks of the murder trial.

Priorities Sought for New Bridge

Priorities to begin construction of the three million dollar South Capitol st. bridge have been requested by District officials through the Public Roads Administration, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of District highways, said yesterday.

Whitehurst said that core drillings had been completed, that plans were ready and that metals in the sub-structure of the bridge had been reduced to a minimum before the priorities request was transmitted to the War Production Board.

It will take a year and a half to complete the substructure of the bridge, Whitehurst explained. He added that the Highway Department was anxious to get started on the new bridge because the expansion of the Anacostia area has severely taxed the capacity of the present Anacostia Bridge at 11th st. se.

Congress appropriated a million dollars for the South Capitol st. bridge last year, and included an additional $750,000 in the present District appropriation bill. The highway director said that the $1,750,000 would be enough to complete the substructure. Although $4,500,000 has been authorized for the new bridge, Whitehurst estimates it can be built for three million dollars.

Army engineers have already been told to go ahead with the Suitland Parkway, which will be a main trunk road to the Army airfield at Camp Springs from the Anacostia end of the new bridge.

Whitehurst also said that the Central Area Transportation Study, which will be the basis of Washington postwar transportation plans, had progressed well within the last month and that spot checking of traffic flow in this study would begin next week.

Mrs. Brandeis Repudiates 2 Hebrew Units

Branding the American League for a Free Palestine and the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation organizations which "defeat causes they purport to serve," Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, wife of the late Supreme Court Justice and outstanding Zionist, who lives at 2205 California st., yesterday disclosed that the use of her name on the list of sponsors of the league was "completely unauthorized."

In an open letter to Peter Bergson, head of the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation which recently purchased a mansion on Massachusetts ave. in which to house itself, Mrs. Brandeis declared: "I want to state categorically that I do not wish my name to be in any way associated with the American League for a Free Palestine, or with the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation or any other group which is not a part of the recognized world Zionist Organization and the Jewis Agency for Palestine. I believe that such organizations defeat the causes they purport to serve and I do not wish to be identified with any of them."

Another protest against the allegedly unauthorized use of names by the American League for a Free Palestine was issued yesterday by 46 American rabbis.

The Jewish Agency for Palestine, with which Mrs. Brandeis said her name might be associated, yesterday denounced the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation as "an unscrupulous piece of political charlatanism," in a cable from Palestine to the American Zionist Emergency Council.

Warning Goes Out To Woman Bitten By Dog in Park

The District Health Department last night appealed to newspapers and police to locate an unidentified woman victim of a mad dog's bite to save her from hydrophobia.

The woman was bitten Thursday by a brown mongrel dog. The attack took place near No. 11 picnic grounds at Beach and Sherrill drives, in Rock Creek Park. Shot by Park Police after the biting, the mongrel was found to be rabid by laboratory tests yesterday.

Pasteur treatment should be given as soon as the woman is found, Health officers emphasized last night. She is the sixty-first victim of a rabid animal's bite in the District this year. The dog was the eighty-second beast proved to be rabid here since January 1.

Editor's Wife Remains In Coma for Fifth Day

Mrs. Herbert B. Elliston, wife of the associate editor of The Washington Post, yesterday remained in a coma for the fifth consecutive day at Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park, Md., where she was taken Sunday after an injury suffered in Silver Spring. Mrs. Elliston was watching a softball game at Jesup Blair Community Park when a tree branch fell and fractured her skull.

Howard U. Seniors Hear Bishop Dun

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, bishop of the diocese of Washington, in an al fresco setting on the campus of Howard University, yesterday delivered the seventy-sixth annual commencement address before 113 candidates for the degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of science, and 27 candidates for the degrees of master of arts and master of science. More than 3000 attended the exercises.

He drew a picture of man, theological in nature, in contrast to the biological, or economic, or sociological man," the concept of whom has caused raging warfare because of differing views as to the superiority and destinies of each kind."

"The most decent things in our civilization," he said, "are rooted in the Christian picture of man, which in turn is rooted in the Jewish picture of man. In this picture the background counts heavily. The background of this picture of man is the basic commitment of our American democracy, which makes us uneasy in our own injustices.

"There are economic, political and sociological adjustments to be made, but unless mankind can take the theological view of himself, he cannot solve his problems by political, economic or sociological devices. The relationship of man with man will not be solved until man can behold himself in the picture which demonstrates the fatherhood of God and human brotherhood."

The honorary degree of doctor of education was conferred on Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of the Palmer Institute, Sedalia, N. C. Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, received the degree of doctor of laws.

Music was furnished by the university choir under direction of Dean Warner Lawson. The invocation was said by Dean William Stuart Nelson, and the benediction by Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

41 Receive Diplomas

Forty-one students of Holton-Arms School and Junior College received diplomas at graduation exercises yesterday. Eight of the students completed the junior college course, 2 the general course, 15 the college preparatory course and 16 received college preparatory certificates. A banquet was held last night.

Twenty-one students of Gallaudet College will receive BA, BS and MA degrees at graduation exercises in Chapel Hall this afternoon. Robert L. Haycock, superintendent of District schools, will deliver the principal address and Dr. Percival Hall, president of the college, will present the diplomas.

Capital's Outbreak Of Scarlet Fever Appears at End

Washington's outbreak of scarlet fever is just about over, Dr. James G. Cumming, head of the bureau of communicable diseases, said last night. Only two cases of scarlet fever were reported to the Health Department yesterday. There have been 3184 cases in the District, of which 254 still are quarantined, since January 1.

The measles outbreak probably will last several weeks more before hot weather clears the city of that disease, Dr. Cumming said. Twelve new cases were reported yesterday which brought the total of measles cases to 2774 for the year.

City News in Brief

Police Seek Students in Coupe In Series of False Fire Alarms

An almost continuous sound of fire sirens for more than an hour caused a mild flurry of excitement in the northwest section of the city last night.

Five alarms, all false, were sounded between 11:25 and 12:30 a. m. The first came from a box at 41st and Garrison sts. and was followed in quick succession from boxes at 45th st. and Cathedral ave., 46th and Brandywine sts., Albemarle st. and Linnean ave., and 31st st. and Upland ter.

Police said the alarms were sounded by a group of young students who were in a coupe, for whom they were searching.

Soon afterward two additional false alarms were sounded in the Southeast section. The first was at 1st and Atlantic sts. and the other at Bellevue dr. and Starboard Green.

Quits in Food Row

The executive committee of the Emergency Hospital board yesterday accepted the resignation of Miss Hattie Sherman as superintendent of nurses in a dispute over service of food to patients of the hospital.

The board also had before it a petition from 42 of the 60-odd nurses on duty at Emergency stating they would resign if Miss Sherman's resignation were accepted.

The difficulty arose when Mrs. Ann Myers, chief dietician, requested that nurses should serve meals to their patients because many of the Negro employes of the dietary department did not appear for work last Sunday. Miss Sherman, it was reported, refused to have the nurses assigned to the task.

Immediately after her resignation was accepted, the committee issued a formal statement to the hospital staff saying that they were being relied upon not to deprive patients of their services.

To War by the Pint

Over 1000 officers and civilian employes of the police department filed up the steps of the Red Cross blood donor center at the Acacia Life Insurance Co. building, 51 Louisiana ave. nw., for the largest enrollment in the District Employes Blood Donor Club.

The group was led by Superintendent of Police Maj. Edward J. Kelly who could not donate blood because he is over the age limit. Commissioner John Russell Young, and Assistant Superintendent Harvey G. Callahan, first members to donate.

A total of 1085 policemen out of 1576 and 50 civilian employes out of a possible 112 volunteered according to data released by Major Kelly who commended the group for their fine response.

Theft via Transom

Twenty-eight new tires valued at $428 were stolen from a gas station at 2305 Pennsylvania ave. se., George W. Besley, manager, reported to police yesterday. The thieves broke into the station through a transom, police said.

Junk-Yard Bound

The case of the wandering automobile, which went on a driverless dash Thursday night and plunged down a 50-foot cliff at the end of 36th st. nw., near Prospect st., yesterday was solved when Pvt. Marcus Cuddy, user of the car, received permission from its owner to junk it.

Earlier it had presented an unusual problem of disposal because it had remained in the street for a day, already close to being junk. Cuddy had borrowed it from a friend, Pvt. Lewis C. White, at Austin, Tex., to come to the Capital on a furlough.

Considers Petition

Justice Jennings Bailey of District Court took under advisement yesterday a petition for appeal by the Washington Gas Light Co., from a Public Utilities Commission order calling for a reduction in the gas company's rate of return.

The order, handed down last November, declared the rate should be reduced from 6.5 per cent to 5.75 epr cent for the rate year beginning September 1, 1943. Such a reduction would mean a saving of about $123,000 to consumers during the year, it was said.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts suspended the PUC order last November pending outcome of the appeal. The gas company contends that the minimum rate of return provided by law is 6.67 per cent.

Possible Meningitis

Latest possible case of contagious meningitis was a 1-year-old child, Jeanne Wolahan of 4607 27th st., Mount Rainier, who was reported by officials of Children's Hospital to be in critical condition yesterday. A spinal tap has been taken and a definite diagnosis on the basis of it will be ready in a few days.

River Yields Wallet

A pocketbook lost three years ago in the Potomac River was found floating and recovered yesterday by Walter Huckster, who lives in a houseboat moored in the 1300 block of Maine ave. nw.

The pocketbook, said to have contained $70 at the time it was dropped into the river, was lost by John M. Vaught, wife of Captain Vaught, USA., who lived at the time at 1722 19th st. nw. The couple now live in Buffalo, N. Y., and have been notified of the recovery. The paper money in the pocketbook was mostly disintegrated.

District Physician Commands Unit in March on Rome

Capt. A. M. Wheeler, a Washington physician, is in command of an Armored Medical Battalion, with the Fifth Army on its march on Rome, an Associated Press dispatch said yesterday.

The dispatch said that Captain Wheeler's battalion was handling numerous patients including both Americans and Germans. The Washington physician is a veteran of the African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

D. C. Builders Are Evasive, Ihlder Says

By Dorothy Williams

The National Capital Housing Authority is serving families who must have rents under $35 a month, according to its executive officer, John Ihlder, but the NCHA "has kept out of the field served by private enterprise."

Ihlder, appearing before a House subcommittee now investigating three local slum clearance bills, said yesterday that private enterprise cannot meet the needs of about three-fourths of the District's slum dwellers, who must pay less than $35 a month rent, he claimed.

"In the five-year period ending 1940, a total of 5.6 per cent of the private housing built had a rental value within the reach of the group comprising over 76 per cent of the families living in substandard housing," Ihlder said. "The median rent charged by private builders during 1935-40 was $55.57, or more than twice the median rental in substandard housing."

'Dreamlike Quality'

Ihlder accused private builders of evading definite statements showing facts and figures on costs of their construction and said that the NCHA had tried several times to get a list of private building costs, but had never received the information requested even though NCHA had supplied detailed statements to the private builders.

"There has been a dreamlike quality in the testimony offered by representatives of the home builders," Ihlder said, referring to the Washington Home Builders' Association represented by James C. Wilkes, attorney. "The one consistency has been in refusing to let us examine their data or to check on the accuracy of their deductions from our data until they presented their findings at hearings.

"If in fact they can build cheaper and better,, manage cheaper and better than NCHA, why fear to submit such facts to scrutiny?" the NCHA executive officer continued. "Since they disclosed their confusion at the Senate hearings and we have had opportunity to inform and correct, they have assumed the defensive attitude of 'that's my story and I am sticking to it.' It seems unreal to hear the exploded myths repeated."

Meet Again Tuesday

Ihlder will continue his statement at the next meeting of the House group, scheduled for next Tuesday morning.

In the Senate, hearings are to be resumed this morning before the subcommittee headed by Senator Harold R. Burton (R., Ohio), whose group has been studying the work of the NCHA for about seven months. Today's session is expected to conclude the Burton hearings.

Witnesses on today's list include: Thomas Locraft of the American Institute of Architects, Mrs. Anita Dufrin, League of Women Shoppers; Miss Alice Padget, American Association of Social Workers; Benjamin C. Marsh, People's Lobby, Inc.; The Rev. Philome Newman, Anacostia Committee, and a representative from the Stanton Park Community League.

Free Nursery Plan Pushed By V. of A.

The Volunteers of America yesterday asked the District Commissioners to review a decision of the District Health Department which had denied the application of the organization for license to operate a nursery school at 1525 16th st. nw.

Protesting that the sponsors had not received a letter from health officials giving the reasons why the department would not recommend the license before it was denied, Maj. Walter O. Ulrey, District superintendent of the Volunteers, last night offered a rebuttal of the points raised by health officials. The three major items of contention were: Less than 50 square feet of space for each sleeping child; an isolation room off the kitchen, and conflicting requirements from various inspectors.

Ulrey's testimony was supported by Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, vice president of the organization, and by Mrs. Marguerite Grey, a working mother, whose two children are in the free nursery school. Mrs. Grey told the Commissioners that she had raised the children by herself and "didn't know which way she would turn if the school is closed."

Ulrey promised that the isolation room would be moved, after telling the Commissioners, who took the question under advisement, that portable cots were now in use, and making it possible to provide more space for each child during the nap period.

He also makes a B average in his studies at Dunbar High.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

Hello, m'boy. . . I've fixed things. No longer will your dad suffer the gnawing feeling that the plant—because of my fine work there—is better off without him.
I've removed a factor which has gravely complicated his illness. . . . I've done this, however, not without injury to my own ego—
Gosh. How—
Don't try to express gratitude for my magnanimity, Barnaby. After all, a Fairy Godfather—
But where's your Army-Navy "E", Mr. O'Malley? . . .
Yes. My "E". . . But when you learn where the production curve stands tomorrow—um.
Sorry, m'boy. . . I choke up when I think of it.

Second Front Explosives Largely in ATS Hands

By Genevieve Reynolds

Know your ammunition? If not, don't try to impress the British Auxiliary Territorial Services with braggadocio tactics. For, thousands of these girls literally are living and working on dynamite, cordite and TNT. Recently at a lonely countryside depot they handled 25,000 tons of explosives for the second front. That was all one day's work.

Not only do they make all types of ammunition but repair it. One hundred forty girls (ATS) remove the dangerous fillings of the explosives. Packing, handling, identifying, hauling and checking of second-front invasion ammunition is largely in the capable hands of the ATS. Accuracy and precision are absolute requisites for the exacting work. These khaki-clad girls can cope with anything from a belt of machine-gun cartridges to a 9.2 shell weighing more than 300 cwt.

Examine Ammunition

Women ammunition examiners do such good work that it has brought special recognition from the War Office. As a result lately they have been allowed to take over this coveted army trade from their men comrades. Subaltern Edith Waterhouse, a 23-year-old technical officer in charge of the examiners and repairers, is the first ATS officer to take over this particular job.

In a vast shed, buried in the peaceful English countryside, 160 ATS are helping check, sort and pack 25,000 different items of signal equipment, required for the communications system of a modern army.

One tiny error—a screw put in wrong container or a loose connection in a field telephone—could delay messages in important battles. But these girls don't make mistakes. They know that the units they check, sort and pack, ranging from pigeon parachutes to complete radio sets, will not be opened until they arrive on the battlefield. Pigeon parachutes enable birds in cages to float down from a plane to a prearranged landing place.

Wear Badges of Job

Still other important tasks are being performed by the ATS. Those of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers are busy wherever tanks, guns, armored vehicles, searchlight apparatus are being assembled for the invasion. You will find them doing acetylene welding, repairing and preparing guns for dispatch abroad, checking tank mechanism, overhauling armored vehicles, driving trucks and cranes.

Some wear the hammer and tongs badge of an army artificer. Trained in their craft, they are expert armored car mechanics, coach trimmers and armament fitters. It's unglamorous, masculine work but vital to the second front.

No Vacations for Them

Approximately 90 per cent of the work at an important blood supply depot is done by a group of ATS. Since Christmas they have toiled without a day off to help build up essential supplies for the second front. From the centuries-old city, the depot supplies the Army at home and abroad with the most up-to-date transfusion material and equipment that modern science has devised.

In civilian life the ATS were shop assistants, factory hands, waitresses—scarcely a one had medical or scientific training. Now in white overalls and face masks they sterilize and bottle precious plasma; peer down microscopes; assemble complicated blood giving and taking sets. They even blow their own glass fixtures.

Fifteen mobile "bleeding teams" are operated from the depot. Each consists of 1 medical officer, 2 VAD nurses, 3 ATS, 2 of which are drivers and 1 an orderly. Also, the depot operates more than 70 vehicles—all driven and maintained by ATS.

In the bacteriological department where all the blood is tested and experimental work carried, many a girl decides to make it a career.

District Churches Will Mark First Centenary of YMCA

Washington churches tomorrow will observe world YMCA Sunday tomorrow, commemorating the centenary of the organization that has been closely related to the churches since its founding. The official centenary date is Tuesday.

A joint committee representing the Federal Council of Churches of Christ and the national council of the YMCA has designed tomorrow's celebration. On June 6, 1844, 12 young men, under the leadership of George Williams, met in an upper room of the store in which Williams worked, and organized a society for the "improvement of the spiritual conditions of young men." Thus the YMCA was founded.

The WMCA was the pioneer in interdenomination work. The World's Alliance of YMCA was founded in Paris in 1855 and is the oldest ecumenical organization in existence. Dwight L. Moody, Billy Sunday and other well-known evangelists began their work in the association. In the 1890's student YMCA's pioneered in informal Bible study and gave impetus to the inclusion of Bible courses in the college curriculum.

In 1910 the Men and Religion Forward Movement was born in the YMCA. Under the leadership of Dr. John R. Nott the World's Student Christian Federation was organized in 1895. In 1889 two American YMCA secretaries went to the Orient in response to repeated calls from missionaries already in the field. Since then nearly 600 secretaries have gone from the United States and Canada to establish the YMCA in 32 countries.

Before the churches developed community leadership training schools for Sunday school teachers, the YMCA led in preparing men and women for this work. This was true of the Washington YMCA. The late W. H. H. Smith conducted a class for Sunday school teachers in the International Sunday School Lessons during the early years of the current century. The first interdenominational leadership training school in the city was founded in 1919 and promoted for a number of years by the local "Y," with the late Homer J. Councilor as dean.

It has been said that the "YMCA was a child of the church." This was especially true in founding of the local association, which was organized on June 9, 1952, under the leadership of three young men, two of whom later became ministers in the Protestant Episcopal Church. Emphasis has always been given to the religious program. For example, last year 97,000 persons attended more than 1300 religious meetings, lectures and Bible classes held by the various branches of the Washington YMCA.

'Y' Leaders Speak

'Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the Central YMCA, will address a service tomorrow at 11 a. m. at First Congregational Church, of which he is a member. The service will commemorate annual Brides' Sunday and also the YMCA centennial.

Page McK. Etchison, religious work secretary of the Central "Y," and president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, will speak at 11 a. m. at Hamline Methodist Church, of which he is a member.

'Radio Pulpit' Is Replaced on Radio

"Highlights of the Bible," an annual NBC feature, replaces "National Radio Pulpit" for the summer months, beginning tomorrow, over NBC from 10 to 10:30 a. m. During the month of June the guest speaker will be Dr. Frederick K. Stamm, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Stamm will broadcast his weekly messages from Chicago, and the remaining portions of the program will come from New York. The prayers will be offered by Dr. Jesse William Stitt, pastor, Greenwich Presbyterian Church, New York.

Topics for Dr. Stamm's talks are: Tomorrow, "Church Bells Are Calling—to What?" June 11, "First Aid at a Roadside"; June 18, "God's Good Man," and June 25, "Theme Song of Jesus."

"Highlights of the Bible," like the "National Radio Pulpit," is presented each week over NBC by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Maj. Holcomb to Speak At Luther Rice Church

Church Group Asks Dry Zones At War Plants

Westminster, Md., June 2 (AP).—Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Washington declared today that "the Methodist Church will not retreat on its stand on the liquor question, promising that "we will continue our fight to the end."

The bishop spoke to approximately 600 delegates on the third day of the four-day annual Baltimore conference of Methodist ministers and laymen. He was introduced after a report of the conference board of temperance by Dr. George Crabbe, president of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

Called Nonessential

Citing the liquor traffic as "a nonessential enterprise" which "should not be permitted to waste food matter," Dr. Crabbe's report called on "the President of the United States as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy to take action to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on any property controlled by the Government, and to create dry zones around all military and naval establishments and around industrial establishments production of any form of equipment or material being manufactured for war purposes."

The delegates also heard an address today by the Rev. Dr. Karl K. Quimby, educational secretary of the denomination's Board of Missions and Church Extension.

The session yesterday elected the Rev. Herman M. Wilson, superintendent of the Methodist Home for the Aged at Gaithersburg, as superintendent of the two Methodist homes for the aged in Westminster.

The conference yesterday adopted a resolution providing that the general conference create a board of social action to deal with problems of juvenile delinquency, rural churches and racial relations.

Hits Discrimination

The general conference was urged to name a committee to work out the appointment, functioning and financing of the group.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Church in Washington, read the report of the social project commission in which the resolution was offered.

"The belief that some races are inferior and must be kept down is the basis of race prejudice," Dr. Rustin declared.

"In this country fear of competition from cheap labor has provided fertile ground for the development of prejudice against white foreigners as well as Negroes and other colored people. The situation has been utilized by politicians seeking office and by employers seeking to maintain low wages."

He also recommended that Methodist ministers cultivate the friendship of neighboring Negro pastors.

Patterson Elected

D. Stewart Patterson of Washington was unanimously reelected president of the layman's group.

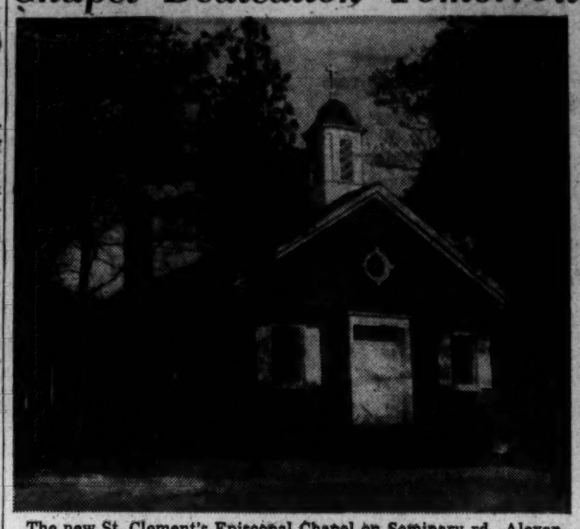
They were George Andrew Blankner, Theodore Roosevelt Bowen, John Rolland Esias, jr., Don Eason Griffin, Adam Edward Grim, Clyde Leonard Manschreck, Raymond James Purnell, Edwin Gilbert Reter and Herbert Lee Weaver, jr.

Chapel Dedication Tomorrow



The new St. Clement's Episcopal Chapel on Seminary rd., Alexandria, will be dedicated tomorrow at 4 p. m. by Bishop Goodwin of Virginia. Designed to serve residents of Parkfairfax and Fairlington, the colonial-type structure was erected at a cost of $18,000 by the Virginia Diocese. The Rev. Darby Betts is rector, and is the first civilian chaplain in the State. The bell was cast from the nose of a Nazi bomber. Among the features of the church are a playground and nursery school to serve the apartment dwellers

7 to Be Ordained To Priesthood by Archbishop Curley

Baltimore, June 2 (AP).—Seven candidates to the priesthood will be ordained in Baltimore Thursday by Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore and Washington.

Five of the candidates were members of the deacon class at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore and two were from St. Mary's, Seminary, Emmitsburg.

The Baltimoreans are: The Rev. John Vernon Ballard, the Rev. Stephen Blazucki the Rev. Joseph Fassett Healy and the Rev. Herbert R. Jordon.

The other candidates, residents of Washington, include: The Rev. George E. Altman, jr., the Rev. James Stone Noyes, the Rev. Maurice J. Wolfe.

Installation To Be Held By Baptists

At services tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Brookland Baptist Church, 16th and Monroe sts. ne., the Rev. Charles P. Burchette, jr., of Gastonia, N. C., will be officially installed as minister of education, and Miss Virginia Davis, of Tappahannock, Va., as church secretary, Dr. Gaye L. McGlothlen, pastor, has announced.

Mr. Burchette, since his graduation a year ago from the Louisville Baptist Seminary, has been the assistant pastor at East Baptist Church, Gastonia, N. C., where he specialized in young people's and Training Union work.

In addition to his seminary work, Mr. Burchette is a graduate of Wake Forest (N. C.) College and attended for two years the Shenandoah Conservatory of Music at Dayton, Va. Mrs. Burchette, who, with their son Johnny, will arrive in Washington later in the month, is a graduate of Meredith College and a native North Carolinian.

Miss Davis graduated last month from the Women's Baptist Missionary Union Training School in Louisville, Ky., and was formerly employed by the AAA governmental agency at Tappahannock, Va.

Baptists Hymn 'Sing'

The Cherrydale (Va.) Baptist Church's double male quartet will sing tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. in Eastern High School stadium at a hymn "sing" sponsored by local laymen. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., pastor of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, also will take part.

Lutheran Outing

The "Open House" youth group of Reformation Lutheran Church will hold a hay ride and wiener roast June 10.

Woodside Pastor

District Post Bid Declined By Dr. Smith

Dr. Ralph Dela Smith, pastor of Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, is reported to have declined an offer to become new superintendent of the West Washington District, a vacancy that will be filled at tomorrow's closing sessions of the Baltimore annual conference at Western Maryland College, Westminster.

Dr. Smith, whose congregation is said to be anxious to have him stay at Woodside, is in line to succeed Dr. John R. Edwards as district superintendent, since Dr. Edwards retires at this conference.

Baptists to Hear New Minister

The Rev. Robert L. Ryerse, formerly pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, Grand Rapids, Mich., will preach his inaugural sermons as pastor of Cherrydale (Va.) "STILL, STILL WITH THEE"
HARRIET BEECHER STOWE

Still, still with Thee
When purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh
And the shadows flee
Fairer than morning
Lovelier than daylight
Dawns the sweet consciousness
I am with Thee.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Harriet Beecher Stowe has not only done the world a great service as a novelist—but also as a hymn-writer. This one appeared in her brother's Plymouth Collection in 1855—and depicts the Christian's faith in the future he sees—life with God.

Church Work Key to Youth, Says Ex-Bible Class Teacher, 88

'Granny' Page Recalls Seeing Inauguration of Lincoln During 1861

By Robert Tate Allan

If you want the secret of perpetual youth, just keep an interest in church work, says Mrs. Elizabeth "Granny" Page, 88-year-old teacher emeritus and founder of the Golden Page Bible Class of Anacostia Methodist Church.

Oldest member of the Anacostia Church, "Granny" Page is just now getting around to admitting that "I'm beginning to get old," even though she does recall being hoisted on her aunt's shoulders to see Lincoln's inauguration March 4, 1861.

Religion Keeps Her Young

Taught Class for 52 Years

The Good Book has always been the cornerstone of her life, she said yesterday, and one of her keenest regrets was having to relinquish the Golden Page Class, which she taught for 52 years.

But occasionally one of the class members will come around and ask her to teach them again some Sunday morning. And she just can't refuse.

At her age, one might think she was ready for the "ole rocking chair," but "Granny" assured us yesterday that there's plenty of life in her yet. Come what may, she is headed for the annual D. C. Organized Bible Class Association conference on Labor Day weekend at Western Maryland College, Westminster. There she is always the center of attention and has the time of her life.

Still Attends Church

In her home at 1739 W st. se., yesterday, "Granny" (that's what everyone calls her) recalled having taught her first Bible class when she was 18, in the old Methodist Protestant Church on Virginia ave. sw. After her marriage to James Vermillion, her first husband, she moved to Anacostia. Her husband died near the turn of the century, and she later remarried.

While she has had to give up active teaching, "Granny" still gets to Sunday school and church, generally in the car of her grandson, Harold S. King, cashier of the Riggs Bank, Dupont Circle Branch, and a vice president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association.

But if she had her way, "Granny" would just as leave walk to religious services. "I still think I could make it all right," she chuckled.

Her parting remark to the press yesterday was a hope that "I'll still be around when the boys come marching home." Her own great-grandson, George King, 19-year-old son of Harold S. King, has just been inducted into the service.

Georgetown U. Exercises Set

Baccalaureate services tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in Dahlgren Chapel, on the Georgetown University campus, will usher in the university's 145th annual commencement.

Officers of the mass will be the Rev. Raymond Paul Repetti, S. J., class of 1935, celebrant; the Rev. John S. Creaghan, S. J., '34, deacon; the Rev. Eugene Gallery, S. J., '19, subdeacon.

Members of the graduating classses and faculty, including the Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, president, will assemble in college corridors before the mass and march in procession into the chapel. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached by the Rev. Daniel E. Power, S. J., a lieutenant in the Army Chaplain Corps, now on duty at Fort Washington, Md.

Father Power had been a member of the college faculty for about six years before joining the Army. He was formerly head of the history department.

After the mass breakfast will be served to the graduates on the campus and the class of nurses, attending their first general commencement, will have breakfast at Georgetown University Hospital.

The commencement exercises will be held at 2 p. m.

Fund Will Be Presented

The Daughters of the King, Washington Diocese, will present the "Master's Fund" tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Ascension Episcopal Church, 12th and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Bible Societies Plan Reconstruction Work

The British Foreign Bible Society, together with the American Bible Society, has arranged to print large numbers of Scriptures in various European languages, including French, Czechoslovak, Rumanian and Serbian. The printing will be done in Sweden, because of the acute paper shortage in England.

At the annual meeting of the British Foreign Bible Society in London it was reported that a sum of $800,000 has already been earmarked for reconstruction work in Europe.

Bible Sales Soar in Occupied Holland

Bible sales in occupied Holland were greater last year than ever before in the 130 years of the Netherlands Bible society's existence, it was reported by the official Netherlands News Agency, Aneta.

The Nazi-controlled Dutch newspaper, Algemeen Handelsblad, had to admit the society sold 75,000 Bibles, 90,000 New Testaments and 40,000 "fragments" of the Bible during the year.

Danes Protest Conduct Of Nazi Soldiers

A "sharp protest" against the conduct of Nazi soldiers in Denmark was signed by prominent citizens of Soenderborg, South Jutland, and delivered to Dr. Werner Best, Nazi minister to Denmark, according to an article in the Swedish newspaper Svenska Morgonbladet.

The article said the protest, which was read from the pulpit in the Soenderborg church the Sunday after the incident described, condemned the "revolting and ruthless" behavior of Nazi soldiers towards a funeral procession passing the Christian X bridge, several days after it was shelled by a German ship. "Noisy and laughing soldiers tried to disperse the procession," the article said, and added that a widow was pushed away from her husband's bier by a Nazi armed with a machine gun.

EVOLUTION
BIBLE STORY OF CREATION—
WHICH IS TRUE?
Was the earth created in six literal twenty-four hour days or over a period of millions of years through a process of evolution? Has man evolved from the lower animals, or was he a direct creation of God, made in the image of God?

Emerson Rites To Be Held On Monday

Military funeral for Bertrand Emerson, 51, prominent Washington lawyer and former assistant United States attorney, will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Emerson, who lived at 3511 Davenport st. nw., died Thursday in Redlands Hospital at Perry Point, Md., after a long illness.

Born in Washington, he was a graduate of Eastern High School and Georgetown University, from which he received a bachelor of laws degree in 1915.

He was a member of the Paris headquarters staff of General Pershing during the first World War. He had previously been retained by Henry Ford to represent his interests on the Ford Peace Ship.

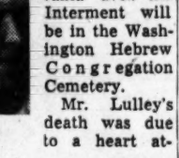
A professor of criminal law at National University for a number of years, he taught former Judge Hobart Newman and Judge Ellen Raedy.

Mr. Emerson was assistant United States attorney under Peyton Gordon from 1920 to 1924. During his tenure, he convicted the last man to be hanged in the District before the electric chair was introduced.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ruth Emerson of the Davenport st. address.

Charles Lulley

Funeral services for Charles Lulley, 50, hotel restaurant operator and coowner of Harvey's, who died Thursday night in Miami, Fla., will be held Monday at 10:30 a. m. at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave.. nw Interment will be in the Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.



LULLEY

Mr. Lulley's death was due to a heart attack.

A native of Washington, Mr. Lulley began his career at Harvey's at the age of 14 after graduation from the Henry School. He started there as a checker and later worked as cashier, in the storeroom, and buyer. It was in 1929 that he bought the famed restaurant with his brother Julius. In 1931, it was moved from its original site on 10th and C sts. nw., to its present location on Connecticut ave.

At the close of the first World War of which he was a veteran, Mr. Lulley began his acquisition of hotel and cafe properties in New York, Washington, Atlantic City and Miami. He was particularly well known for his Atlantic City hotel property. He was a 32d degree Mason.

Mr. Lulley is survived by his widow, Mrs. Estelle Lulley of Miami, a son, Ross, who is in the Coast Guard, and a brother, Julius of Bowie, Md.

Selden M. Ely

Funeral services for Selden M. Ely, 77, former supervising principal of the fifth division of the elementary schools, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Central Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Ely died Wednesday at his home, 2918 Cortland pl. nw., after a career of 45 years in public service.

Active pallbearers will be Floyd W. Bush, Francis M. Hoffheins, Leland Hunt, James T. Mathews, Roy W. Prince and Lieut. (j. g.) Harvey Wise, USNR.

Honorary pallbearers will include Clifford K. Berryman, Homer Brown, Maj. Arthur W. Carnduff, USMC; Clifton P. Clarke, Henry L. Draper, Joshua Evans, jr., Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries, USA, retired; W. L. Fulton, Henry Gilligan, Robert L. Haycock, Harry O. Hine, Wharton E. Lester, Robert H. McNeil and A. Corwin Newkirk.

Capt. S. R. Shumaker

Memorial services for Capt. S. R. Shumaker, 49, of 3512 Rodman st. nw., whose family has been notified of his death by the Navy Department, will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. at St. Alban's Church.

Captain Shumaker graduated from the Naval Academy in 1915 and served in the last war.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eleanor McKnight Shumaker, two daughters, Eliza Cochran Shumaker and Margaret Blair Shumaker, and a son, Samuel Robert Shumaker, jr.

Auction Sales 8

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE THREE-STORY BRICK BUILDING, NO. 704 NEW JERSEY AVENUE NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6503, folio 235, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, within the sales rooms of Adam A. Weschler & Son, 915 E street northwest, on THURSDAY, THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, 1944, AT TWO O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot lettered "B" in Charles De Selding's subdivision of lots in Square 565, as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia, in Liber B at folio 123, improved as above.

TERMS OF SALE: Property will be sold subject to a prior building association trust of $3,766.89 at six per cent, payable monthly; balance cash. A deposit of $500 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Emerson Rites To Be Held On Monday

Military funeral for Bertrand Emerson, 51, prominent Washington lawyer and former assistant United States attorney, will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Emerson, who lived at 3511 Davenport st. nw., died Thursday in Redlands Hospital at Perry Point, Md., after a long illness.

Born in Washington, he was a graduate of Eastern High School and Georgetown University, from which he received a bachelor of laws degree in 1915.

He was a member of the Paris headquarters staff of General Pershing during the first World War. He had previously been retained by Henry Ford to represent his interests on the Ford Peace Ship.

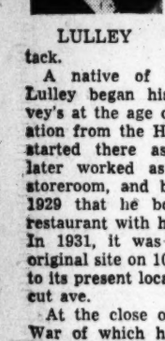
A professor of criminal law at National University for a number of years, he taught former Judge Hobart Newman and Judge Ellen Raedy.

Mr. Emerson was assistant United States attorney under Peyton Gordon from 1920 to 1924. During his tenure, he convicted the last man to be hanged in the District before the electric chair was introduced.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ruth Emerson of the Davenport st. address.

Charles Lulley

Funeral services for Charles Lulley, 50, hotel restaurant operator and coowner of Harvey's, who died Thursday night in Miami, Fla., will be held Monday at 10:30 a. m. at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave.. nw Interment will be in the Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.



LULLEY

Mr. Lulley's death was due to a heart attack.

A native of Washington, Mr. Lulley began his career at Harvey's at the age of 14 after graduation from the Henry School. He started there as a checker and later worked as cashier, in the storeroom, and buyer. It was in 1929 that he bought the famed restaurant with his brother Julius. In 1931, it was moved from its original site on 10th and C sts. nw., to its present location on Connecticut ave.

At the close of the first World War of which he was a veteran, Mr. Lulley began his acquisition of hotel and cafe properties in New York, Washington, Atlantic City and Miami. He was particularly well known for his Atlantic City hotel property. He was a 32d degree Mason.

Mr. Lulley is survived by his widow, Mrs. Estelle Lulley of Miami, a son, Ross, who is in the Coast Guard, and a brother, Julius of Bowie, Md.

Capt. S. R. Shumaker

Memorial services for Capt. S. R. Shumaker, 49, of 3512 Rodman st. nw., whose family has been notified of his death by the Navy Department, will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. at St. Alban's Church.

Captain Shumaker graduated from the Naval Academy in 1915 and served in the last war.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eleanor McKnight Shumaker, two daughters, Eliza Cochran Shumaker and Margaret Blair Shumaker, and a son, Samuel Robert Shumaker, jr.

Selden M. Ely

Funeral services for Selden M. Ely, 77, former supervising principal of the fifth division of the elementary schools, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Central Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Ely died Wednesday at his home, 2918 Cortland pl. nw., after a career of 45 years in public service.

Active pallbearers will be Floyd W. Bush, Francis M. Hoffheins, Leland Hunt, James T. Mathews, Roy W. Prince and Lieut. (j. g.) Harvey Wise, USNR.

Honorary pallbearers will include Clifford K. Berryman, Homer Brown, Maj. Arthur W. Carnduff, USMC; Clifton P. Clarke, Henry L. Draper, Joshua Evans, jr., Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries, USA, retired; W. L. Fulton, Henry Gilligan, Robert L. Haycock, Harry O. Hine, Wharton E. Lester, Robert H. McNeil and A. Corwin Newkirk.

Here Is a Chance to Buy a Brand New Brick Home Inside Washington

Newly built; never lived-in—we had enough good prewar materials in our warehouses to build a few homes to the old standard of excellence. These charming homes have a spacious Living Room, an entirely separate Dining Room and a MODERN KITCHEN on the 1st floor. 2nd floor has 2 good-size bedrooms and a real tile bath and shower in color. The basement is full size and each home has a lovely garden. You will find such top quality prewar features as steel casement windows, hardwood floors and many others. The community is restricted, and already has more than 500 occupied homes. Complete shopping center in the development. Choice of trolley or bus; take any streetcar to 7th and Pa. Ave. S.E., transfer to the Bennin Bus and get off at River Terrace. Or take any streetcar marked Kenilworth, Seat Pleasant or District Line and ride direct to River Terrace. By auto: Drive to 15th and H Sts. N.E., then out Benning Road to River Terrace. Only 25 minutes by bus or trolley from downtown.

JOE PALOOKA — Not Interested — By Ham Fisher

AWWW—I'LL BE PUNK COMP'NY.
GIRLS, I WANT YOU TO MEET JOE PALOOKA AND MR. LEEMY—MISS WILTON AND MISS DORSON.
THIS IS A PLEASURE.
DELIGHTED
HOWDA DO.
W-WHY HOWDA DO!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Fruitless Search — By Frank Martinek

WINGING THROUGH THE DAWN THE FLYERS SEARCH EVERY CRACK AND CRANNY OF THE ISLAND
SQUADRON LEADER TO BASE! SQUADRON SEVEN HAS SCOURED THE COAST CLEAN—NOTHING'S IN SIGHT! ROGER!
HOLY CACTUS, THE SEA'S AS EMPTY AS THE DESERT... HICKEY, REPORT WE'RE COMING IN!
...AND, BUCK, THAT'S THE STORY, BUT I WON'T REST UNTIL THEY FIND RED... PLEASE, GOD....
JUST A MINUTE, DON! THE PHONES RINGING!
WHAT'S THAT?
VERY WELL, BUT IT'S SURE BAD NEWS FOR DON, AND THE NAVY!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

YOU SAY YOU WANT TO MARRY SUPERMAN, NOT ME. WHAT'S HE GOT THAT I HAVEN'T GOT?
LOOKS, FOR ONE THING—AND STANDING IN THE COMMUNITY!
YOU MUST BEAR IN MIND, MR. MXYZTPLK, THAT I'M NOT A GOOD PERSON. I WANT WEALTH, POWER—ALL THE THINGS THAT I CAN GET THROUGH SUPERMAN....
I BOW TO THE INEVITABLE—I WILL HELP YOU WIN HIM!
ALL I ASK IS TO BE ALLOWED TO BE NEAR YOU FOREVERMORE!
MY SLAVE!
HMPH! SHE ISN'T CONTENT TO ENSLAVE EVERY MAN ON EARTH—SHE EVEN HAS TO INCLUDE MONSTROSITIES FROM OUTER-DIMENSIONAL WORLDS!
MEANWHILE—
THEN YOU WILL HELP ME TO WIN MISS DREAMFACE, MR. KENT?
A PROMISE IS A PROMISE, TED, EVEN IF I HATE IT! (—AND SOMETHING TELLS ME THIS IS GOING TO BE A SUPER-HUMAN TASK—EVEN FOR SUPERMAN!-)

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

AS A POWERFUL CRANE HOISTS THE PORTUGESE DIVER IN HIS WEIRD ARMOR OVER THE SIDE OF THE TREASURE SHIP--
GOOD LUCK, MIGUEL!
I DOUBT IF HE CAN HEAR YOU, ZIRCON--IN THOSE CAST-IRON COVER-ALLS!
LOWER AWAY! --AN' EASY DOES IT! STEADY WITH THAT---- UGH! HE SURE WELCOME TO THAT JOB, STEVE!
SNAP!

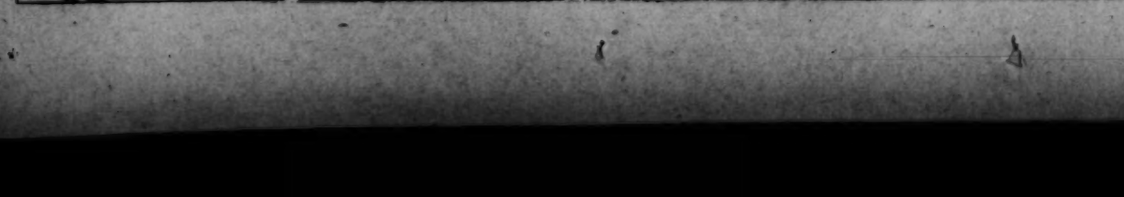
JANE ARDEN — New Assignment — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

HOW'D YOU LIKE TO GO TO THE RACES, JANE?
IF SHE NEEDS HELP CAN I GO?
HAVE YOU EVER INTERVIEWED A HORSE?
THERE'S A NAG NAMED "THE ZIPPER" ARRIVED YESTERDAY WHO'S NEVER LOST A RACE—
OH, BOY—I'D SURE LIKE TO HELP OUT ON THIS ONE—
THE ZIPPER IS WORTH A STORY AND SO IS HIS OWNER DIAMOND JOE JEEVERS—THEY SAY HE'S QUITE A CHARACTER!
OKAY, ED!
SHUCKS, WHY CAN'T I EVER GET A BREAK LIKE THAT?

WINNIE WINKLE — You're Not Insinuating! — By Branner

AS LONG AS THERE'S A SABOTOOR AROUND, I'M GONNA KEEP MY EYE ON EVERY MAN I SEE!
YOU'VE BEEN DOING THAT ANYWAY, DAISY!
HOW DO YOU KNOW IT ISN'T A WOMAN??
OF COURSE, IT COULD BE A WOMAN! WHY, IT COULD EVEN BE ME!!
SAY—MAYBE IT COULD BE---NAHH!! IT COULDN'T BE YOU---
--A SABOTOOR IS USUALLY PRETTY SMART!!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

..I FIGURED KING WOULD SET A TRAP AT THE BANK!
YES, KING! BUT HE WON'T INTERFERE...MY ROBOT FINISHED HIM!
FOR $20,000 I'D HELP HIM 'SCAPE SOME COPS...BUT KING'S A FRIEND! I'LL SHOW THIS BLANKETY MURDERER! I'LL...
